GENERAL BEAVER HOME AFTER 4 MONTHS ABROAD

TENDERED A RECEPTION

Home Friends Greet Distinguished Citizen at Presbyterian Chapel—Looks Fine and Says He Greatly Enjoyed His Trip.

Looking the picture of health and saying that he felt just as fine as he looked, General Beaver arrived home on Sunday morning from his trip abroad. General Beaver was gone 112 days. As might have been expected, one of the first things he did after arriving home was to make a hurried trip to State College to see how the institution in which he is so greatly interested was getting along.

A home-coming reception for General Beaver was arranged in his honor at the Presbyterial chapel on Tuesday evening. Many life-long friends and neighbors were there to welcome him back to Bellefonte.

The return of Gen. Beaver from an absence from home of nearly one-third of a year suggests the range and extent of his trip abroad.

Having been appointed a delegate to the great Missionary Conference to be held in Edinburgh, by the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church, to which he belongs, the trip was undertaken originally for the purpose of discharging the duties incident to his appointment.

The suggestion of a missionary cruise for the purpose of a practical inspection of missionary effort, particularly in the Levant, undertaken by the Bureau of University Travel, met with a ready response, so far as he was concerned, and he became one of those composing that party.

After attendance upon the Conference at Edinburgh, having prior thereto made an automobile tour through England from London to Lake Windermere, Kesick and the beautiful lake region of northern England, he returned to London, spending several days there as the guest of his nephew, Mr. John B. White, who has been for several years in charge of the London office of the J. G. White Company, Limited, which is largely interested in the building of electric tramways, not only in England but all over the world.

The Missionary Cruise party left London about the 28th of June, crossing from Harwich to Holland, where a train was taken to Cologne. A day was spent at Cologne, where the magnificent cathedral and the other interesting attractions of the city were enjoyed. From Cologne the journey to Coblenz was made by rail, where the Rhine and Moselle unite. At the point of junction, a magnificent equestrian statue of Emperor William der Grosse, the Grandfather of the present Emperor, is erected. The statue and the surroundings are most impressive.

The ascent of the Rhine was made from this point to Rudisheim, from which point the journey to Munich was continued by rail.

Munich is a very beautiful modern city of moderate size but with much of fine architecture and art which well repaid a hasty early morning drive.

Thence to Oberammergau was a comparatively short ride, carrying tourists to the foothills of the Alps. The object of the journey was, of course, the opportunity, occuring once in ten years, of seeing the Passion Play, noted the world over, as rendered by the citizens of this mountain village, the play having been founded originally as an act of thanksgiving for the delivery of the community from the ravages of disease. The rendition of the play requires an entire day, the details of which are full of interest and surprisingly devoid of dramatic art and yet so full of dramatic interest in themselves that they hold the attention and interest of the great audiences which fill their simple but attractive opera house, the stage of which is in the open air.

The tourists left Oberammergau on the morning of the 4th of July, a little celebration having been held at the railroad station before leaving. Short addresses were made by Gen. Beaver and Rev. Dr. Dobbs, of Alabama, the entire party uniting most heartily in singing America at the close of the celebration. It was impossible to distinguish between the loyal, patriotic sentiment of the addresses made by the representatives of the North and of the South.

A few hours by rail brought the party to Munich, where they took another train, going through the Brenner Pass

STATE ROAD ON LINN ST. IS READY FOR TRAFFIC

First Section of One-Half Mile Open Tomorrow or Saturday.

ALLEGHENY ST. IS NEXT

Contractors Will Finish Uniform Curbing There Before Resuming Paving—Bishop Street to be Without Uniform Curb.

The first half mile of State road through Bellefonte has been completed and will be opened to the public tomorrow or Saturday. The only possible delay in this program is an unexpected and heavy storm such as would hold back the workmen from putting on the finishing touches.

From the borough line, near the lime kilns, below Bellefonte, through Linn Street, to the corner of Linn and Allegheny Streets, the asphaltum dressing has been placed on the State road, the huge steam roller has done its work of making the streets as smooth and level as a floor and finally, after weeks and weeks of dreary waiting, the road is ready for traffic. It also marks the opening to the public of the first paved streets in Bellefonte. The section finished is composed of a lime stone base, with asphaltum dressing, and covers the full width of the street. On either side of the street is uniform curbing, which will extend from the borough line, below the residence of Frank McCoy, through Linn to Allegheny and along Allegheny to Bisnop. Owing to opposition from certain property owners in Bishop the uniform curbing will not be extended along that street.

According to those in charge of the work, the curbing along Allegheny Street will be finished before the body of the road will be completed, including that section from the intersection at Linn Street to Pike Alley, at Parrish's drug store. From Pike Alley to Bishop Street the street will be paved with brick. The laying of the brick will constitute the last work to be done in Allegheny Street. As publisheu in "The Republican" two weeks ago, Watsontown brick will be used for the paving, which will extend from curb to curb.

WERE AWAY; HOME BURNED

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Malone, of Marsh Creek, Have $3,000 Fire.

An unusually pathetic case was that last week of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Malone, of Marsh Creek, who were away on their first outing in twenty years and who while returning learned that their home had been burned to the ground. The loss on the property was $3,000, with but $500 insurance.

Mr. and Mrs. Malone, after more or less planning, visited the grangers picnic at Centre Hall. It was their first visit away from home during their twenty yearsof married life and quite naturally they looked forward to it with no little enthusiasm. They spent the greater part of the week at the grangers picnic and were thoroughly enjoying the outing when word was received that their home had been completely destroyed by fire. They hurried home, only to find everything in ashes. They were unable to explain the origin of the fire.

Shipping Tar to Philadelphia.

The Bellefonte Steam and Gas Company is this week shipping several carloads of coal tar to the Barrett Manufacturing Company, in Philadelphia. Large tank cars, holding over 0,000 gallons, each, are used for the purpose. To load the tar into the cars a two-inch iron pipe has been run from the large tank at the plant of the Bellefonte Gas and Steam Company to the car, at the siding of the Central Railroad of Pennsylvania. The tar is moved in the pipe by means of gravity, aided by a small fire to heat it as it enters the pipe, and also a steam pump to keep it constantly moving. Several days are required to fill one car.

Suit Over Cider Press.

A suit over a cider press resulted in a hearing on Saturday before Squire W. H. Musser. The suit was filed by the John L. Kurtz estate against William H. Miller, of Axe Mann, claiming a part ownership in a cider press purchased a number of years ago. The press was originally valued at $122. For the defendant it was held that the claim was outlawed. Mr. Kurtz died in 1894. Ccunsel for the claimant contended that the six-years limitation did not apply and asked that judgment be entered for $61 and costs, which was allowed by Squire Musser.

Homely Hitching Posts; Homely Truths

Several weeks ago "The Republican" called the attention of the Bellefonte merchants to the importance of winning back the immense country trade that has little by little been drifting to the stores in the smaller towns in the county. Many merchants—to be more specific, a large majority of them—accepted what "The Republican" had to say in the spirit in which it was writen. They heartily indorsed it. Two or three chose to resent it; that is, they were annoyed that anybody should intrude on their slumber.

This is a continnation of that story. Now we purpose talking straight from the shoulder about the hitching posts. We suppose that no matter how hard one tried he couldn't make a hitching post beautiful or ornamental. It seems that the hitching post was destined to be a homely affair. So that discussion on the artistic phase of the subject is bound to lead to empty words.

There is a quiet movement under way to have all the hitching posts in Bellefonte chopped down and hauled away so that our streets may be made the more beautiful. Sadly deluded is the person who advocates any such policy of business suicide. Is it not a fundamental truth that without such business institutions as are here, Bellefonte soon would wither up and blow away? The same would be true of any town. The business man may have his fine residence but the residence first had to be secured and that through his successful efforts at his business house. In other words, the business institutions in Bellefonte make possible and support the homes in Bellefonte. Weaken one and you weaken the other. Strengthen one and you strengthen both.

We admit that, artistically, Bellefonte would be somewhat beautified by removing the hitching posts in Allegheny and High streets. There isn't any question about the artistic end of it. We are reminded in this connection of an opera presented a few years ago by a promoter who was inclined to be more theoretical than practical. He ignored the suggestions of his best friends. His dream was for an opera that would artistically, would surpass all previous efforts. Finally it was presented to the public but, financially, it was a failure. A friendly rival congratulated the promoter on the artistic success of the venture.

"Yes," replied the promoter, "it was too damned artistic. It was so artistic that everybody stayed away."

The homely hitching post is a connecting link between the merchant and the man or woman who drives to Bellefonte to attend to some shopping. Take away the hitching post and the country visitor will have no place to which to tie his horse. Any sane man can see the result: The country trade that continues to do its shopping in Bellefonte will go to some other place. And we are honest enough to frankly say that we couldn't and wouldn't blame the country trade for going where it had reason to believe it was wanted.

Saturday, last, was not a very busy day with Bellefonte merchants. There were some country people in town, but not nearly so many as on a good many other Saturdays. We concluded to take a walk about town and see how many hitching posts in Allegheny and High Streets were in use. We made two tests, one shortly after 11 o'clock in the morning and the other about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. At 11 o'clock in the morning every hitching post in High Street and all in Allegheny Street except one or two in front of Pauble's store, were in use. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon virtually every hitching past in the two streets was in use. The question naturally suggested itself: "Where else would those farmers hitch their teams and feel that they were safe?"

Would it not be good, plain, common, business sense to bring more hitching posts to Bellefonte instead of taking down the small number now standing? Since a town subsists on what business it does, wouldn't it be a beautiful sight were our streets to be filled with the teams of farmers and our stores crowded with shoppers? Wouldn't it, by far, be a more beautiful sight to have lots of homely hitching posts and lots of country people in town shopping than to have no hitching posts and no country trade? A few of our streets might be more artistic without the hitching posts but, as was the case with the unfortunate opera, there is such a thing as driving the country people away by making things too "d——d artistic!"

We recommend to our merchants that they go down into their jeans and make an investment. We venture the prediction that it will be one of the best investments they have ever made. Not much actual cash will be required. It is an investment that calls for more courage than cash. We recommend that every merchant in Bellefonte see to it that in front of his business place there are as many hitching posts as may conveniently be erected and that on each hitching post is placed a small sign conveying this message:

SNOW SHOE BRICK PLANT

Work Begun Monday on Railroad Sidings; Make Brick by Christmas.

The new Snow Shoe Fire Brick Company on Monday started work building two railroad sidings to connect with their plant and it is expected that brick will be turned out not later than Christmas. The company has purchased from 20 to 25 acres of clay, which is said to be exceptionally fine for making brick. The Lehigh Valley Coal Company is a part owner in the company.

The Company will at first confine its operation to making fire brick, although it is planned to eventually manufacture also building brick and terra cotta pipe and tile.

Moving Pictures at State.

Clayton Brown and Jacob Marks are contemplating going into the moving picture business at State College, with Mr. Marks in charge at that end and Mr. Brown continuing to direct his Bellefonte branch, at The Scenic. They are figuring on erecting a suitable building at State College and giving exhibitions of the same high standard as those which have made The Scenic so popular.

Mrs. A. A. Pletcher Dead.

Mrs. A. A. Pletcher, of Howard, died last night at her late residence at that place. She is survived by a husband and two daughters, Mrs. Carl Noll, of Pitcairn, and Mrs. Howard Robb, of Howard.

Wreck Near Port Matilda.

Two freight trains were slightly wrecked near Port Matilda on Friday evening, last. Nobody was injured, but eight cars, a caboose and one engine were pretty badly damaged.

2 IN ONE FAMILY DIE

Sad Affliction of Haines Family; Typhoid Causes One Death.

Two deaths in one day was the sad affliction on the Haines family, well known in Boggs township. On Sunday night, last, Dorsey Haines, who was a liveryman at Woodland, died after a brief illness, aged 39 years, 6 months and 11 days.

Three hours after the death of Mr. Haines word was received that his sister, Mary, aged 15 years, had passed away at the home of her father, in Boggs township. Mr. Haines' death was due to typhoid fever. His sister had been ill with tuberculosis.

Killed by Steam Shovel Car.

Paul Buijiska, a foreigner employed digging cinder for Thomas A. Shoemaker, at the Bellefonte furnace, was run over by the big steam shovel car, on Thursday morning, last, and sustained injuries which caused his death on Friday morning at the hospital. Deceased was aged 28 years and was a native of Hungary.

Notice to Veterans.

All members of the (old) 11th P. V. I. in attendance at the dedication of the State Memorial at Gettysburg, Sept. 27, 1910, are requested to assemble at 8 o'clock A. M., Sept. 27, at the Regimental Monument, Seminary Ridge, the scene of the first day's engagement, July 1-4, 1863.

TENER FAVORS STATE MAINTENANCE OF ROADS

Nominee For Governor Wants Taxpayers Relieved of Burden.

HAS PUBLIC APPROVAL

Republican Standard Bearer Demonstrates Interest in Welfare of People—Has Given Road Building Personal Attention.

That the State should not only build but maintain public roads is the stand taken by John K. Tener, Republican nominee for Governor. Under the system favored by Mr. Tener, townships would be relieved of the cost of repairing the roads in question.

In his address at the grangers picnic, at Centre Hall, last week, Mr. Tener declared that he favored a system of road building that would not only improve the public roads but make them passable every month in the year. It was in an address at a meeting at Shamokin, on Monday evening, last, that he took the advanced ground in favor of having the State not only build but repair and maintain the roads.

In many sections the cost of maintenance of State roads has proved a heavy burden to the taxpayers. Mr. Tener demonstrates that he has given the matter his personal attention and furthermore that he has solved the problem in a manner which at once meet with popular approval. Expressing his views on this subject, Mr. Tener said:

"A department of our state, and one which I know interests all of you much, has not received adequate appropriations. I think greater appropriations should be given and thatthe department should be much more aggressive. I favor a comprehensive system of state-wide road improvements, so that every road in this commonwealth could b: made passable 12 months in the year, and that as soon as possible.

"I also believe that the state should take over the maintenance of the roads as well. For we know that after the state does build roads their maintenance is turned over to country or township authorities so that the annual repairing cost and maintenance cost are much increased after the first and second years after the road has been built.

"I believe that a road could be maintained for $150 to $200 per annum, while if it is allowed to deteriorate and go down to subgrade it probably will cost on an average of $800 per annum. Hence I think the state should take care of its roads."

Had Thrilling Accident.

Dr. David Dale met with a thrilling accident on Thursday morning of last week and it was due only to his presence of mind that he escaped being killed. While going up a hill, near the Bellefonte furnace stone quarries, his automobile stalled and then started to back down the steep incline. Dr. Dale applied the brakes but for some reason they would not hold the car. As the rapidly moving machine passed under a tree, Dr. Dale grasped an overhanging branch and swung to a place of safety. Several feet farther down the hill the car struck a small tree, where it stopped. With the additional weight of Dr. Dale in the car the machine in all probability would have broken down the sapling, in which event he and the automobile would have plunged over the high cliff at that point. With the assistance of several men and a rope and tackle the car was hauled back onto the road.

Young Railroad Man Weds.

John I. Lucas and Miss Viola D Summers, both of Snow Shoe Intersecti on were married at 7 o'clock, on Saturday evening, last, at the United Evangelical church parsonage, the ceremony being performed by the pestor, Rev. I. C. Shearer. The bride is a daughter of George Summers and is a most estimable young lady. The groom is employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and is popular with a large circle of friends, all of whom extend congratulations and best wishes for a long and happily married life.

Candidates For Sheriff.

Jacob S. Knisely, the blacksmith, is distributing cards announcing himself a candidate for Sheriff, subject to the decision of Centre County Republicans at the primaries in 1911. George H. Yarnell, of Zion, also has advised his friends that he will be a candidate for the Republican nomination.

"Bellefonte Daily." Resumes.

Fred Dunham, at Howard, yesterday resumed publication of the "Bellefonte Daily." He expects to keep it going Here's hoping so.

GEORGE SPICER HELD ON YOUNG GIRL'S CHARGE

Accused of Statutory Rape on 15-Years Old Anna Parks.

RELEASED ON $500 BOND

Defendant Waived Hearing and Bail Fixed by Judge Orvis—Prosecutrix Unable to Read or Write and Did Not Know Meaning of Oath.

George Spicer, janitor and elevator operator at the Temple Court building, was arrested on Saturday charged with statutory rape, the prosecutrix being Anna Parks, 15 years old. Spicer is 58 years of age.

Spicer waived a hearing before Judge Orvis and was held under $500 bond for court. After some delay he was able to furnish bond and was released from custody.

Squire Henry D. Brown, who issued the warrant, was uncertain as to his power to release Spicer under bond and the latter thereupon appeared before Judge Orvis, at the latter's office. He made no comment regarding the charge, which upon conviction would mean a prison sentence.

The prosecutrix, according to Squire Brown, is unable to read or write. When making the information against Spicer and called on to swear to the charge, she appeared unable to comprehend the the meaning of the oath.

Meeting of Council.

At the regular meeting of Council, on Monday night, last, two ordinances were passed dealing with the paving of Allegheny Street in conjunction with the building of the new State road in that street. The one ordinance regulates the paving with asphaltum macadam on either side of the State road from Linn Street to Pike Alley. The other provides for the paving with brick, from curb to curb, on Allegheny Street from Pike Alley to Bishop Street. The width of this part of the street will be 50 feet instead of 46, as originally planned. The Street Committee and the borough engineer reported a number of sidewalks needing repairs. Council directed that the property owners be given twenty days in which to make necessary repairs.

Praised Court House Repairs.

On returning home from his European trip, General Beaver this week made a tour of inspection of the remodeled Court House. He warmly praised the County Commissioners for the splendid work done, pronouncing our Court House now to be one of the finest and most complete he has ever seen.

Admit Children Free at Fair.

On Wednesday, October 5, children will be admitted free to the big Centre County fair. Announcement to this effect was made yesterday by the management. The dates for the fair are October4, 5, 6 and 7.

PRACTICE WHAT WE PREACH.

The religion of "The Republican" is urging home people to patronize home institutions. We stoutly adhere to the belief that every dollar sent out of Centre County for things which may be purchased at Bellefonte stores is just that much profit lost to some Bellefonte merchants.

"The Republican" this week received from one of the largest mail order houses in the country, an order to publish nine columns of advertising, about two columns to run each week, and we were afforded the privilege of naming our own price for the space used. This advertising covers groceries, furniture, wire fence, stoves, carpets, clothing, dry goods and notions, in fact virtually everything to be found in all of the Bellefonte stores.

Believing that for us to accept this advertising would be to do injury to the merchants of Bellefonte, we have refused the order, even though it is the most attractive, financially, ever made to this newspaper. At the same time, we want to ask the merchants of Bellefonte this question:

"If firms outside of Bellefonte find it profitable to advertise clothing, dry goods, carpets, groceries, etc., in Bellefonte, why do not Bellefonte merchants get awake and advertise?"

CAN YOU ANSWER THESE 146 BIBLE QUESTIONS?

Miss Lois Torbert, of St. Louis, Did and Won World's Contest.

MANY OTHERS FAILED

Mrs. Anna B. Fitch, of Troy, Ohio, Failed on Last Question—Examine the List and See What You Can Do—It is an Interesting Study.

Miss Lois Torbert, of St. Louis, won the world's annual Bible contest, held recently at Winona Lake. Miss Torbert and Mrs. Anna B. Fitch, the latter of Troy, Ohio, remained standing long after numerous other competitors had retired. Finally Mrs. Fitch also dropped out, the question which she failed to answer being:

"Who prophesied that Christ would come out of Egypt?"

The contest proved to be very interesting and as it progressed the questions became the more difficult to the several participants. The following are the questions:

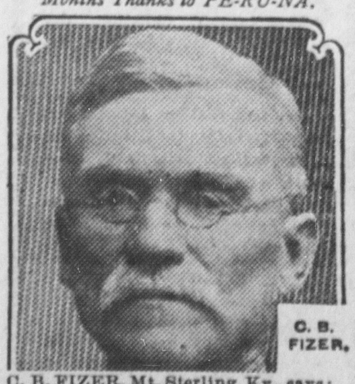
KIDNEY TROUBLE

Suffered Ten Years—Relieved in Three Months Thanks to PE-RU-NA.



C. B. FIZER.

C. B. FIZER, Mt. Sterling, Ky., says:

"I have suffered with kidney and bladder trouble for ten years past.

"Last March I commenced using Peruna and continued for three months. I have not used it since, nor have I felt a pain."

Mothers to Daughters.

One of the most difficult problems of the home is how to manage a headstrong wilful daughter, says Barbara Boyd in the Philadelphia "Evening Times." Many a mother tosses uneasily on her pillow at night wondering how she will keep Marjorie within bounds, or correct some of her bad habits. She has tried all sorts of methods, but Marjorie only seems to slip farther and farther beyond her control. The poor mother feels almost helpless and hopeless. She knows something must be done or Marjorie may make a smash of her life. Yet an almost agonized study of the problem brings no solution.

It is of no use to tell the mother that the child's management should have begun in the cradle. No doubt the mother realizes now that if she had nipped Marjorie's wilfulness when it first showed itself, there would be no wilfulness in later years to cope with. But this is another story. The wilfulness is here, grown to monstrous size. What now can be done with it?

When a young girl is headstrong, when she does things to which her parents object, little is gained by scolding her or by forbidding her to do these things. Such a course is apt to arouse only a spirit of opposition, to antagonize, perhaps to make the daughter sullen, openly defiant or secretly disobedient. She feels that her parents are her enemies to be battled with in any way by which she may triumph. No worse thing could happen than that parents and daughter should be thus ranged on opposite sides.

Sometimes, too, right and wrong are placed before a girl in such a light that to be good seems to be namby-pamby and out of date. She does not want to be "goody-goody." Going to heaven when she dies does not have any particular attraction for her. Sitting with a crown on her head and a harp in her hand she propably thinks would be exceedingly dull work. At any rate, dying is, she hopes, a long ways off, and the alluring present, with its good times, very much at hand. So she chooses the one and lets the other take care of itself, to many a virtuous mother's horror.

Few young girls are so hardened that they will not respond to love and a genuine sympathetic interest in their affairs. Instead of a mother's ranging herself in opposition to her daughter, or of scolding, upbraiding or ordering her to stop doing certain things, let her go over to the girl's side. Instead of forbidding her to smoke cigarettes because it is wrong, let her drop the moral side of the question and appeal to the girl's common sense. With such girls it is better to get off of a high ethical platform which they care nothing about and come down to such matter-of-fact things as to how these habits will affect her complexion. When a girl realizes that you are quite as much interested in her future right here on earth, as you are in her heavenly career, she'll listen to you.

Go over the ground with her in a loving, but common sense way. Show her particularly what her bad habits, whatever they may be, mean to her looks, to her manners; that these results, in turn, will cut her off from the nicest associates and cause her to be less happily married. Picture what a happy marriage and a happy home may be hers with the right sort of people, and what an unhappy, discordant home is hers with the wrong sort of associates. When this is done lovingly, and at the same time in practical, common sense sort of way that appeals to her own good sense and judgment, few are the young girls who will not respond.

Faded Parasols.

Many a woman now finds her parasol a bit faded with the summer sun, and she will be glad to renovate it by the use of veiling. This practically gives a new parasol for the late summer. It may be draped with chiffon or net. A black satin or silk parasol draped with white chiffon is one of the chic styles at present.

TEDDY TURNED DOWN BERRY MEN

Keystone Political Game That Failed to Work.

ROOSEVELT JOLTED BOLTERS

Former President, Instead of Aiding Insurgents, Lauded Administration by Pennsylvania Republicans.

Probably the most disappointing incident of the state campaign to the managers of the Keystone Party was the failure of Roosevelt to comply with their request and make some reference in his Pittsburg speech to Pennsylvania political conditions that would aid the Berry candidacy for governor.

A special committee of Keystoners was delegated to get in touch with the ex-president as soon as he arrived and urge him to directly or indirectly help their cause in his speech. The committee got a complete turn down.

They quickly learned that Roosevelt was not going to be a party in any way to help along the campaign of a Democrat for governor of the stalwart Republican Keystone State.

He was perfectly familiar with Berry's free silver and Bryanite record before the Keystone committeemen broached the subject, and not only did they get absolutely no encouragement from Teddy, but he gave them a body blow when he did make his speech by lauding the record of the Republican party in this state.

Mayor William A. Magee, who is at the head of the Republican organization of Allegheny, and upon whom devolved the duty of making the speech of presentation to the great Pittsburg audience, was, with other stalwart Republicans upon the platform, greatly elated over the utterances of Roosevelt upon that occasion.

In touching upon Pennsylvania conditions, the former president in part said:

"And now, friends, in closing, I want to call your attention to the fact that there is not anything at all to be depressed about in present conditions in America. We have got lots of good to our credit.

"You have some admirable laws on the statute books here in Pennsylvania. Take the way that you care for your schools—your compulsory law—your appropriations for the schools—your appropriations for school books, so that every boy and girl in Pennsylvania can get an education. And now, you are administering that law so that their parents and nobody else can cheat them out of the education. You have on the statute books the eight-hour law as regards the employes of the government. You have laws prohibiting child labor and minimizing the number of hours and regulating the labor of women—laws that have not in the past been always executed as they should be, but which I think are steadily being better executed, from all that I can hear.

"You have made excellent forestry laws, excellent conservation laws, in connection with your forests and waters. It is a great sum of positive achievement of which you should be proud. But it is better not to be proud of it than to feel that, because you have done pretty well, you are therefore to be excused from doing anything more. Do not forget that you won't stand still. If you do not go forward you will slip backward. Now, so it is about America as a whole."

These words of recognition of the splendid administration of the affairs of the commonwealth under Republican officials were sincerely and earnestly spoken.

Kissing.

Kissing in its modern promiscuity is pernicious and should be condemned as dangerous.

The custom probably had its origin not in affection but in suspicion. In primitive times, when the sense of smell was perhaps more acute than that of sight, bringing the faces together was a means of identification and of distinguishing friend from foe. We have now other better developed senses, psychic and physical, which tell us of friendship, and kissing has become a mark of affection rather than a test of it.

It is not against this that the hygienist—the sensible one—protests, but against the meaningless and dangerous habit of pecking at the lips of every one, especially of the defenseless infant. It is really an affront for a stranger, or even an ordinary friend, to kiss a baby on the lips and the act should be resented.

Kissing among members of the family is hygienically permissible, fortunately. It is of course through the transmission of bacteria that kissing is harmful. But each family has its own domesticated bacteria, as it were, of the same species as those inhabiting other people, but somewhat modified by constant interchange. Against these each member of the family is in a measure immune. They are like an ill-natured pet dog that respects the members of the household with which it lives and will not bite them, but snaps and snarls at strangers.

Kissing should therefore be a family greeting for strangers or ordinary friends the handshake suffices. Above all, the baby's lips should be sacred.—Youth's Companion.

A Reliable Medicine—Not a Narcotic.

Mrs. F. Marti, St Joe, Mich., says Foley's Honey and Tar saved her little boys's life. She writes: "Our little boy contracted a severe bronchial trouble and as the doctor's medicine did not cure him, I gave him Foley's Honey and Tar in which I have great faith. It cured the cough as well as the choking and gagging spells, and he got well in a short time. Foley's Honey and Tar has many times saved us much trouble and we are never without it in the house." Heart Troubles

The heart may be weak just the same as the eyes, stomach or other organs. It often happens that a person is born with a weak heart. Then again disease, fevers, over-exertion, anxiety, nervousness, rheumatism, etc. weaken the heart. The result is shortness of breath, palpitation, pain in the heart, or in some of the nerves of the chest or abdomen. The heart should be strengthened with a tonic, and for this nothing equals Dr. Miles' Heart Cure.

"I had LaGrippe last fall as I thought in a mild form. I was weak, tired feeling, and short of breath; could hardly go about, and a good deal of the time sort of an asthmatic breathing and extremely nervous. I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nervine and now I feel so much better in every way. I am so thankful that I began taking this medicine, and shall not hesitate to tell others how much good it has done me."

The Republican Party.

Tuesday's election in Maine assumes its full significance only when considered in connection with other political events and developments of the past few months, says the Pittsburg Gazette-Times. These all have revealed unsatisfactory and unpromising conditions in the Republican party. Some will say that, at the worst, this is merely politics, and that it makes compartively little difference to the country at larve, the great mass of the people, which of the two leading parties is in power. But is that true?

Every published interview with men of affairs familiar with finance and commerce embraces an assurance that business is sound at bottom and there is no real cause for apprehension. At the same time admission is made that there is widespread lack of confidence, a feeling which penetrates to the remotest corners of the commercial world. If the inquirer goes farther he will be told that this lack of confidence is due almost wholly to the uncertain political outlook. That uncertainty, moreover, is as to whether or not the Republican party will continue in supremacy at Washington. If some assurance could he given that the Democrats would not secure a majority of the next House, which means that they would have small chance of winning the next presidency, business and productive enterprises would proceed with reasonable serenity. Financiers would be persuaded that, even with decisions adverse to certain corporations in pending appeals to the highest court, there would be no legislative experiment such as might tend to cripple any legitimate industry for the sake of political exploiation. Unfortunately, not because of anything that the Democracy has done, but on account of its own dissensions, no such assurance can be given for the Republican party. For these divisions, created by factionists, have spread dissatisfaction throughout the country until evidently there is a spirit of unrest and a demand for a change which must be reckoned with.

The deplorable part of it all is that this situation has been brought about by Republicans themselves. Insurgents have departed from the old, safe ane constructive standards of the party which, while aggressive, were constitutional rather than rampantly radical, and orderly rather than revoluntionary. It is one thing to protest against the prolonged domination of old leaders and managers—that is a matter of men and methods—but it is quite another to attempt to convert the party to populistic doctrine, a complete overturning of established conservative principles and the utter abandonment of tried and tested anchorages. It is because a considerable and delibdrately disturbing element in the Republican party has seen fit to make a virtue of the very things which in Brvanism and the Bryanized Democracy were considered dangerous a few years ago that today there is doubt of the political future and unconcealed fear of the outcome.

Maine is hailed by insurgents as a vindication of their attitude on public question and Republican policies. It is also acclaimed by Democrats from coast to coast as heralding a Democratic national victory. What it ought to result in, as speedily as may be, is a rallying of the Republican hosts to the same standards, principles and purposes that hitherto have brought triumph to the party and prosperity to the nation.

BONES OF FLOOD VICTIMS

Have Recently Been Dug up in River Bed at Johnstown.

The Johnstown Tribune last week published the following:

"The bones of a number of victims of the Johnstown flood of 1889, sewing machines, coins, spoons, kitchen ware, and any number of other relics of the great catastrophe have been taken from the river bed at the Stone Bridge the past couple of days by workmen engaged in digging the trench for the pipe line of the Manufacturers' Water company, and sad memories have been awakened in many breasts. Most of the relics have been appropriated by the workmen, but the bones have been gathered up in a bag and will be turned over to Superintendent Bradimyer, of Grand View cemetery. Some of the bones of probably eight different skeletons have been found already.

"As the trench being dug through the river bed at the Stone Bridge is only seven feet wide, there is hardly any question that hundreds of other bones and relics would be uncovered if the bed should be cleaned out. This action has been advocated for years, as the river at the Stone Bridge becomes filled up so at times from deposits dropped when the Stoneycreek and Little Conemaugh currents meet at flood time that banks overflow there at almost every high water.

"About 160 men under Foreman Conrad Raab are working in shifts of ninety men during the day and sixty at night, laying the water line along the high stone bank of the Conemaugh river. The depth of the trench varies at different places, but the diggers had to go down a little over seven feet at the Stone Bridge to reach the old river bed and solid bottom. The first four feet consisted of deposits of the last twenty years; under that for a depth of three feet was found nothing but wreckage of the flood. This included portions of frame houses, poles, wires, hinges, locks, smashed furniture and the bones of some of the victims of the calamity. At one place the workmen had to dig out part of a chimney that was still in pretty good condition.

"Just under the bridge the workmen had to take two layers off the stone pier of the old iron bridge that crossed the river some years before the flood. This was one of the hardest obstructions encountered."

Wheat and Corn Exports.

Wheat, including flour exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending September 15, as reported by telegraph to Bradstreet's, aggregate 2,174,023 bushels against 1,511,068 bushels last week and 2,286,891 bushels this week last year. For the eleven weeks ending September 15 exports are 15,950,694 bushels, against 22,119,422 bushels in the corresponding period last year. Corn exports for the week are 174,039 bushels, against 276,452 bushels last week and 95,540 bushels in 1909. For the eleven weeks ending September 15 corn exports are 2,762,896 bushels, against 1,140,943 bushels last year.

GREAT CROWDS GREET TENER

Candidate For Governor Gets Fine Ovations.

MAKES BIG HIT WITH VOTERS

Republican Standard Bearer Frankly Meets Live Issues and is Assured of Splendid Victory.

John K. Tener and his associates on the Republican state ticket are being given splendid receptions and ovations on their trip through the state.

The meetings have in almost every instance been even larger than those witnessed in the triumphal tour of Edwin S. Stuart four years ago.

Keen interest in the success of the campaign and enthusiasm for the nominees, manifested in every county that has been visited, must foreshadow a great victory in November.

Pennsylvania Republicans are harmonious and aggressive, and with the Democracy divided between Grim and Berry, the indications are that the majority for John K. Tener for governor will be the largest given to any nominee for that office in this state in recent years.

Believes In Education.

For his clean-cut, manly and frank discussions of the issues of the campaign, Candidate Tener has been commended upon every hand. He does not hesitate to express himself freely upon all questions and is taking the people into his confidence as he goes from place to place, meeting the voters face to face, and grasping them by the hand and impressing all with his candor and sincerity.

In chatting with a well known educator the other day, Mr. Tener said:

"I firmly believe that education, coupled with good sound common sense, will do more to obliterate the thought of anticipated and imaginary dangers in the future than any other agency that can be invoked. I am a firm and everlasting believer in the cause of education. It has served where modern equipment in the hands of a well-drilled militant force would have been without avail and has done more to make the United States the wonderful nation that she is than anything we have ever known.

"Build school houses, have competent instructors, interest the youthful minds, and happiness and clean, godly lives can be the only result."

At Home Among Wage Earners.

During the course of an address to coal miners of Schuylkill county, Mr. Tener said:

"It has been my misfortune that I have never visited this section of Pennsylvania before, and while I am not a stranger in a community of this kind, because I come from the soft coal region of the Monongahela river. I live with and associate with men who work in the mines and in the shops of that great industrial district. On the river that flows past my door more than 9,000,000 tons of coal are floated every year, so that in coming here and seeing you, the same kind of people that we have at home, in the same line of work, I feel quite at home. I know that your lives and your thoughts and your aims are very much like ours at home and your political belief ought to be like ours at home. We are Republicans there because we believe that through the Republican party we receive the greatest benefit.

"My neighbors are the workmen of the United Mine Workers' Union, and out there every man that works in the mine is a union man. The United Mine Workers' Union has set a high standard for themselves and for all union labor, in my opinion, because whenever they sign a contract with the operators they see to it that it is kept, so that we live in harmony and peace."

Keeping Sheets Dry.

The dampness of summer, especially in the dog days, is bad for bed linen. Few housekeepers think that damp sheets are as injurious in summer as in winter.

Insist upon sheets being ironed dry, and if uncertain that your commands are obeyed have a responsible person examine them before they are made up in the bed. If there is the least dampness, air them for half an hour or an hour.

An elderly person whose vitality is low may get rheumatism or dangerous colds from the least dampness of sheets. It is a wise precaution to put a hot water bag in the bed for a few minutes before retiring time. This is most necessary the first night after sheet are changed.

Many ills come from impure blood. Can't have pure blood with faulty digestion, lazy liver and sluggish bowels. Burdock Blood Bitters strengthens stomach, bowels and liver, and purifies the blood

Where America Leads.

Robert Herrick, an author, praised in an after-dinner speech in Chicago the philanthrophy of the American millionaire.

"Our millionaires, with all their faults," he said, "are in their charities the most liberal men in the world. We should be glad that no American fashionable preacher can say of his rich parishioners what I once heard a London fashionable preacher say from the pulpit very bitterly.

"Our upper classes," the preacher sneered, 'don't give according to their means but according to their meanness.'"

Again Pennsylvania.

In his Music Hall address of Saturday evening last former President Roosevelt was frank enough to dwell in a commendatory way upon "some admirable laws" that are on the statute books of Pennsylvania, placed there through the instrumentality of the Republican party. To this incident The Gazette Times has already directed attention, though it is but one of several that have been to the credit of this regular and dependable Republican state. Yesterday at Syracuse there was another. Gov. Hughes of New York, who will shortly take his place upon the Supreme Court of the United States and may become Chief Justice, was speaking at the state fair. He is nearing the end of a second term as executive of the first state in the Union and is concededly one of the foremost men of his day. He was pleading for the adoption in New York of a change in government such as was made in Pennsylvania more than 35 years ago, at a time when the Republican party was predominant in this commonwealth, as it has been most of the time since; and, although the subject to which he addressed himself is not partisan, it ought to be gratifying to all our citizens that we solved in great degree long ago problems which are still vexing larger communities. Briefly stated, Gov. Hughes wants the Empire state to centralize executive authority. He says:

As the burdens of state administration increase it will be found necessary, in my judgment, if the state government is to maintain proper efficiency, to centralize executive responsibility and in our state government to follow the analogy of the Federal Government. I think it would be a decided improvement if the governor was elected for a term of four years and were ineligible for re-election, and if the other state officers, now elected, were made appointive heads of departments. There is no loss of accountability to the people in such concentration of power and of the corresponding responsibility. For people can center their attention upon the election of a governor, but they do not properly fix it upon the election of a large number of co-ordinate state officers.

Pennsylvania has but five elective state officers, while New York has many. There are some other respects in which Pennsylvania does better for her people than New York, but this is enough to indicate that we have been progressive and wide awake. With two such men as Col. Roosevelt and Gov. Hughes referring publicly to features of legislation and government peculiar to Pennsylvania, and worthy of emulation, there is reason to feel satisfaction and pride.

Short Memories, Indeed !

Charley Glenn, the veteran and well known photographer, carries about with him during these days of political arguments, an old newspaper clipping which is well worth quoting. This is what the clipping says:

"If your friend, who prattles so glibly about the sad plight of the working man at the present day is, as you say, an old Cleveland tariff man of 16 years ago, his monumental assurance well-nigh passes belief.

"Why, this time 16 years ago, the starving condition of the working classes was the daily topic of the Democratic papers themselves.

"In its issue of August 13, 1894, the New York World had an article headed, 'A Summer of Suffering,' in which it piteously referred to the 'cases of starvation' recorded in its pages 'from day to day.'

"And six months before that date, on March 13, 1894, it had printed a picture of the 'millionth loaf' that had been distributed even through its free bread fund as a direct result of the election of Cleveland and his free-trade Congress.

"Truly some Democrats have short memories."

General Beaver Home.

of the Alps and the Austrian Tyrol, which was most interesting in every way, the scenery of the descent being unusually attractive.

Trent, formerly a part of Italy but now of Austria, was the scene of one of the celebrated Church Councils. The night was spent here and the journey resumed the next morning. One of the principal attractions at Trent is a fine statue of Dante.

A hasty trip along the eastern coast of Italy, through vineyards, olive and fig orchards, brought the party to Brindisi on the Adriatic, at which point they took possession of the steel yacht Athens, which was to be their home for twenty-three days. This period was spent in cruising the Adriatic and in visiting points of interest on the Aegean Sea and its outlying branches, including Greece, in which a full week was spent, and other points of interest, such as Patmos, Smyrna, Rhodes and other islands.

Many of the missions of the American Board of Foreign Missions, as carried on by the Congregational Church for the most part, were visited and their practical work inspected as far as it could be done, in view of the fact that all the schools were in vacation and many of the missionaries were taking their yearly rest on the mountains and where they could escape the heat of the summer. These missions cover much of the old missionary territory visited by St. Paul and extend over Turkey in Europe and Asia.

A number of days were spent in Constantinople and the Bosphorus was ascended to the entrance of the Black Sea. Robert College on the bank of the Bosphorus, which has been doing a splendid educational work for more than fifty years, and the site of the new Woman's College, one of the most picturesque on the shores of the Bosphorus, were visited and greatly admired.

After leaving Constantinople, the most prominent point visited immediately was Beirut, where another college under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church has been founded and is most successfully carried on. The buildings and equipment would do credit to any college anywhere. The campus is upon the shores of the Bay and is a picturesque locality. The college is really doing university work and it is expected that its charter will be changed this year so as to make it the University of Beirut instead of the Syrian Protestant College. Whilst the party were there, or immediately preceding their visit, authority had been received from Mr. Cleveland H. Dodge, of New York, to build a college Y. M. C. A. building commensurate with present and future needs of the University, no limit upon the amount to be expended accompanying the gift.

Sunday was spent in a mountain village near Beirut, known as Suk-el-gharb. At this point successful mission work is done, both in schools and by evangelistic effort.

From there the journey was continued by rail to Baalbeck, where are the ruins of a magnificent temple said to have been originally built by Solomon and subsequently modified and enlarged by Greeks, Romans and Mohammedans. The ruins are extremely impressive—perhaps as much so as anything of the kind seen by the party. The quarries in the immediate neighborhood, which furnish the material of which the temple was built, gave some idea of the amount of labor necessary to quarry and transport this material. One stone, which had been removed from the quarry and remained upon the ground, was 64 feet in length, 14 feet in height and 13 feet in thickness. It was most impressive.

The journey was continued by rail from Baalbeck to Damascus and from Damascus, which is a large, and in many respects, flourishing city, the party went by rail to a station at the foot of the Sea of Galilee and thence, by small boats to Tiberias. A slight storm gave them a vivid realization of what the disciples of our Lord encountered, when they could make no headway by rowing and when He commanded the waves to be still. The Sea of Galilee is a beautiful little inland lake, less than twenty miles in length and probably from three to five miles in width.

The journey through Palestine was made, for the most part, in covered spring wagons, with frequent stops before Jerusalem was reached. Tiberias to Nazareth, Nazareth to Mount Carmel, Mount Carmel to Zimerin, a self-governing colony said to have been founded by the Rothschilds, Zimerin to Sheckem, and Sheckem to Jerusalem, completed what may be called the overland trip through Palestine. Several men of the party went from Nazareth directly to Jerusalem on horseback. The main portion, however, went from Nazareth to Mount Carmel, which is on the Mediterranean, and then by a good carriage road to Jerusalem, taking in many points of interest.

Nearly a week was spent in Jerusalem and several days at Nazareth, Mount Carmel and other points. Joseph's tomb, the tomb of Eleazer, the son of Aaron, and other places of interest were pointed out by the dragoman or guide, but one soon learns to accept the statement of so-called guides with many grains of allowance. This is particularly true at Jerusalem, where there is more or less of dispute as to nearly every point said to be connected with the closing scenes of the life of our Lord.

Jerusalem to Jaffa is a short and interesting run by rail. From Jaffa the journey to Port Said the party reached Cairo in Egypt, by rail.

The annual rise in the Nile had commenced before Egypt was reached and the temperature had in consequence been much improved; indeed throughout the entire trip, where much discomfort was naturally expected because of the temperature, the party found themselves for the most part sympathizing with their friends at home, because of the unusual heat reported from many localities.

From Cairo a special train, composed of compartment sleeping cars and a dining car, took the party to Luxor, where there are many ruins of very remarkable temples and other buildings. This was the northernment point on the Nile, reached in the journey, and return was made to Assult, where the American Mission, conducted by the United Presbyterian Church, has a fine College. Indeed the mission work of this church is very remarkable and successful and has been conducted from its beginning simply as the American Mission. They have a fine girls' college in Cairo, the main building having been completed less than a year, and being already too small for the demands upon it.

Cairo is an interesting city, with many modern features and seems to be the centre of tourist travel, particularly in the wintertime, in Egypt.

From Cairo to Alexandria was a short run, where a missionary Presbytery was in session.

At Alexandria, ship to Naples was taken, where several days were spent. From Naples to New York a run of 4187 miles occupied within a few hours of two weeks. Thus was completed a tour of parts of four continents, involving the travel of at least 15,000 miles, without accident, delay or any serious interference by weather or untoward incident.

The S. S. Cretic reached New York harbor in the early morning of Saturday, the 17th instant. After the Cretic left Naples it had been declared a cholera port and the vessel was detained, therefore, at the Quarantine Station below New York for several hours, and this, together with the examination of baggage, etc., by the Customs Authorities, prevented Gen. Beaver from taking the early train home and he was, therefore, compelled to leave Saturday night, reaching home in the morning train next day.

Recent Deaths.

MRS. ROSE ANNE MAGUIRE.

At 5 o'clock P. M., on September 5, 1910, at her late home in Half Moon valley, Mrs. Rose Anne Maguire, widow of Mark Maguire, and daughter of Samuel and Ruth Hutton. The deceased was born in Huntingdon County, January 25, 1819, and attained the ripe age of 91 years, 7 months and 10 days. In 1845 she was married to Mr. Maguire and to this happy union nine children were born, two of whom have died. The surviving children are Ruth Anne Gage, of Warriors-Mark; Michael and John Maguire, of Philipsburg; Paul Maguire, of Morrisdale Mines; Mark Maguire, Sarah Hoover and Rachael Maguire, at home. They mourn the loss of a sainted and beloved mother. Mrs. Maguire was a most devoted Christian wife and mother, industrious to the fullest measure of her strength. She provided for her children food, comfort and Christian training in such a manner as to command the highest admiration of all her friends and neighbors. She was reared by parents who taught her the way of the Lord and at the age of 12 years she was led to make a full consecration of life to her Master. She at once united with the Methodist Episcopal church, of which she was always a faithful, active member, many times using her life and influence to turn others to righteousness. About four years ago she was stricken with partial paralysis, from which she never fully recovered, remaining an invalid until the close of her life. On Friday morning, September 2 she was seized with a second attack, which rendered her unconscious and in this condition she remained until God took her. One of God's choicest spirits has left us and we miss her sympathy and counsel.

Death hides but cannot divide,
Thou art but on Christ's other side:
Thou with Him and He with me
And so together still we be.
Could I but win you for an hour
From off that starry shore,
The hunger of my soul were stilled.
For death has told you more
Than the melancholy world doth know—
Things beyond all love.

Funeral services were held at the Ross Methodist Episcopal church, on Thursday, September 8, conducted by Rev. A. L. Frank. Interment was made in the cemetery nearby, where her body rests in waiting until the just shall rise again.

GEORGE HERMANN.

George Hermann, one of Philipsburg's best known business men, died at that place on Thursday night, last. Deceased was aged about 60 years and was born near Pottsville. For the last seventeen years he had been engaged in the mercantile business in Philipsburg.

JOSEPH J. WAY.

After an illness of but a few days, Joseph James Way died on Wednesday of last week at his late home, at Philipsburg. His death was caused by typhoid fever. Deceased was aged 26 years, 7 months and 28 days. He is survived by a widow and two brothers.

HARRY J. FILES.

Harry J. Files, formerly of Philipsburg, died at Altoona on Sunday, last, aged 19 years. His death was due to typhoid fever. Before going to Altoona Mr. Files was employed in Mellick's drug store, at Philipsburg.

HIGH SCHOOL DEDICATED

Interesting Exercises in Honor of Completion of New Building.

Bellefonte's new High School building was formally dedicated on Friday, last, appropriate and especially interesting exercises being held both afternoon and evening. In the afternoon the attendance of parents of the school children was not so large as was the case in the evening, when the large auditorium was thronged to the doors.

The feature of the afternoon exercises was an address by President E. E. Sparks, of State College, who in his characteristic pleasing style held the attention of the audience from start to finish and frequently elicited bursts of applause. The theme of his address was the importance of training children along lines that will be of benefit to them when they leave the schoolroom. That the public school will eventually engage in domestic and manual trajning, to meet constantly changing conditions, was his prediction. He advocated that the public school training be shaped to meet the requirements of all of the students, urging that while one-fourth or one third may be able to attend college the large majority may be destined to step from the school room to industrial occupations and that the latter class, therefore, should be equipped with more than a mere scientific training. Dr. Sparks urged that the new building be made a social center during the summer months.

The program was changed somewhat to enable Dr. Sparks to speak in the afternoon instead of in the evening, owing to the requirements on his time incident to the opening of State College for the year. Another very interesting address was that by Professor C. D. Koch, formerly of Philipsburg, and now an inspector of High Schools, attached to the Department of Public Instruction, at Harrisburg. Professor Koch congratulated the people of Bellefonte for their patriotism in building such a splendid school building. He, too, urged that it be used to the very best advantage. With some emphasis he declared that the public schools should at all times be divorced from politics. In the audience were a number of Professor Koch's friends from Philipsburg, who made the trip especially to hear his address.

In the absence of Dr. M. J. Locke, president of the Bellefonte School Board, the exercises were presided over by D. F. Fortney. The concluding speaker of the afternoon was J. C. Meyer, whose remarks were well received. Seated on the platform with the several speakers was Rev. Dr. Ambrose M. Schmidt, who pronounced the invocation.

The evening exercises were much more largely attended. The chief address was that by Dr. David Snedden, commissioner of education in Massachusetts, who chose as his subject, "Vocational Education." He strongly urged that the young men and young women of today be instructed in manual and domestic training, explaining that such a training is so often found lacking when the boy or girl leaves the school and undertakes to earn a living. Years ago, he pointed out, the boy invariably followed the occupation of the father and soon acquired the latter's knowledge in a particular line. More recently, he continued, times and customs have changed and the education of the boy or girl along lines that will be of the greatest benefit is too often neglected.

The exercises were brought to a close with an address by Judge Orvis and the pronouncing of the benediction by Rev. Dr. J. Allison Platts.

The musical features of both afternoon and evening exercises were far above the average and were greatly appreciated. The Ladies Glee Club sang several very pretty selections in the afternoon. In the evening the Ladies and Gentlemen's clubs rendered several fine numbers. A violin solo by Miss Dorothy Bible was pronounced to be one of the finest ever heard in Bellefonte.

SAD DEATH OF BOY

Twelve-Year-Old Harry Hoover Meets Death in Minnesota.

Harry J. Hoover, aged 12 years, at one time a resident of Unionville, was killed by a fall from a railroad locomotive at St. Paul, Minnesota, last week, his body being brought to Unionville on Monday for interment. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Oyler, of Milesburg. The unfortunate young man was a son of the late J. G. and Charlotte Hoover, his father dying about one year ago. For some time past the family have been residing at St. Paul.

The only details at hand are that the boy was playing on the locomotive when he fell. He lived for about eight hours after the accident.

Surviving are the boy's mother, one sister, Mrs. Edda Brothson, and two brothers, Willis and Lewis, all of St. Paul.

Seeking Honors in Minnesota.

James R. Grassmire, a former Milesburg boy, but now residing in Minnesota, is an applicant for appointment as postmaster in his home town, which is one of the suburbs of St. Paul. His father, Joseph T. Grassmire, of Milesburg, was in Bellefonte on Monday, circulating a petition of indorsement as to his character and integrity, which will be used in conjunction with his application for the office and the more important letters of approval of Minnesota friends.

GAME LAW BULLETIN

United States Government Prepares Condensed List for Hunters.

To avoid confusion naturally resulting from the complexity of game laws enacted by the legislatures of different States, the United States government has issued a bulletin summarizing the numerous laws and pointing out where they are uniform, that is, where the same States have the same laws. Considerable attention is devoted to the game laws of Pennsylvania and New Jersey. The "open season" in Pennsylvania is referred to as follows:

Deer (deer without horns protected all the year) November 15 to December 1.

Bear, October 1 to January 1.

Hare, rabbit, November 1 to December 15.

Squirrel, (gray, black, fox) October 15 to December 1.

Quail, wild turkey, October 15 to November 15.

Ruffed grouse, imported pheasant (Chinese, English, Mongolian) October 15 to December 1.

Hungarian partridge, May 1, 1911.

Dove, blackbird, reedbird, coot or mud hen, rail, sandpiper, tatler, curlew, or any shore bird. September 1 to January 1.

Woodcock, October 1 to December 1.

Upland or grass plover, July 15 to December 1.

Wilson snipe (jacksnipe), September 1 to May 1.

Wild waterfowl—duck, goose, swan, loon, grebe, September 1 to April 10.

Export of the following varieties of game is prohibited in this state and New Jersey:

Pennsylvania—All protected game taken in the state.

Exceptions—Non-resident licensee may take with him from the state one day's bag labeled with his name and address and number of his license. Live English, Mongolian and Chinese pheasants raised in captivity may be exported.

New Jersey—Squirrel, hare, rabbit, quail or partridge, ruffled grouse or pheasant, pinnated grouse, English pheasant, ringneck pheasant, woodcock.

Exception — English or ringneck pheasants killed on preserves established prior to April 15, 1903, may be exported from the state. Non-resident licensee may export ten rabbits and fifteen birds a day if carried openly.

Laws fixing the limit for the capture of game are compartively recent. New Jersey holds down the hunter to one deer a day and thirty marsh hens a day.

Pennsylvania's regulations are: One deer a season; 6 squirrels, 10 rabbits or hares a day; 10 quail a day, 40 a week, 75 a season; 5 ruffled grouse a day; 10 each of English, Mongolian or Chinese pheasants and woodcock a day, 20a week, 50 a season; 1 wild turkey a day, 2 a season. Possession limited to season's limit.

Bellefonte Boy Advanced.

The numerous friends of Frank Miller, a Bellefonte boy who has been located at Tyrone for the Adams Express Company for some time past, will be glad to learn of his success with that big corporation. He was recently transferred to Monnessen, where he was temporarily placed in charge of the office at that place. For a time Frank was express agent on the Bald Eagle Valley division, but more recently he has been serving as a clerk in the Tyrone office.

Wedded at Philipsburg.

David A. Nelson and Miss E. Belle Thomas, both of Philipsburg, were married at that place on Friday evening, last, by Rev. W. G. Fulton, pastor of the United Brethren church. The groom is a son of Daniel Nelson, track foreman of the Philipsburg street railway company.

Savaltion Army Meeting.

C. C. Shuey will conduct a special meeting in the Salvation Army hall, on Spring Street, Friday night September 25. Exerybody welcome. Also special meeting Sunday, Monday and Tuesday nights.

Convicted of Murder.

A jury at New Castle, Pa., this week convicted Dominico Panoro of murder in the first degree. Panoro shot and killed Orin Maguire, of Philipsburg, who was employed as a street car conductor in New Castle.

Dog Poisoner at Work.

At Mt. Union, last week, some miscreant poisoned a dozen dogs in one night. The dogs were found dead in the street.

Howard.

The one big event of the month and probably the last social outing for the summer was the second annual banquet and reception of Washington Camp, 518 P. O. S. of A., which was held on Saturday evening, last. The members and friends of the order had been contemplating this occasion for some time and the date had been set for two weeks ago but inclement weather necessitated its postponement. The reception took place at the hospitable home of Brother H. A. Yaudes and wife, about one mile north of Howard and the evening was most auspicious for the occasion. The Howard cornet band was on hand and discoursed excellent music during the evening to the delight of the large assemblage. The evening hours soon passed away and the call for supper was made, and delightful refreshments were served by Caterer Frank Williams. Sandwiches, coffee, ice cream, cake and bananas were served. In all about 225 persons, consisting of members of the order, their wives or sweethearts, the veterans of the G. A. R. and the ladies of the P. O. of A., participated in the layout. District President W. F. Leathers was then chosen master of ceremonies and addresses were made by Rev. Rollin S. Taylor, Henry Thompson, Rev. W. W. Rhoades, Rev. E. F. Faust, and Rev. W. H. Patterson. While the speakers are not members of the order they entered into the spirit of the occasion and put all in a happy mood and inspired a deep feeling for the order. The event was a pleasing success in every way, much to the gratification of all concerned.

Jack Frost was in our community several nights last week, but owing to the heavy fogs his visits did not do any damage to the late produce.

School directors W. H. Long, C. H. Pletcher and Dr. Kurtz attended the dedication of the new high school building at Bellefonte last Friday.

John Weber, Chester Moore, William and Harry Wetzel, Horace and Harold Schenck, Russell Wagner and Charles DeHaas were among those who went to Lock Haven last Friday evening to hear Sousa's band at the Lock Haven opera house.

Mrs. William Weber is the possessor of a beautiful night blooming cereus and for several nights last week the family and friends watched the flower unfold its beautiful petals. Sunday night was the last time for it to open and Mr. Weber endeavored to secure some one with a camera to take a flash light photograph, but at the time no powder was available and the photo could not be made.

Under the direction of councils, Street Commissioner James Wyble continues repairing the streets, Black street being the last to receive attention in the way of filling and grading.

The harvesting of the buckwheat crop the past few days gives evidence of plenty of warm breakfast cakes during the approaching winter, but in the face of a dearth of a shortage in the proverbial sausage gravy, or liverwurst.

Unionville.

On Saturday, while Mr. Dillen, of Julian, was in T. E. Griest's store, his team frightened at an antomobile and up the road they dashed at a dead run. Fortunately Alfred Heaton, our news agent and shoe black, happened to be up at Hazel's. As soon as he saw the runaways he started on the run after them, grabbing the aft horse by the bridle and holding on until the team stopped. Alfred certainly deserves praise for this act of heroism, as he no doubt averted a smash-up and perhaps a serious accident. Here's our hand, Alfred.

D. E. Fisher's cider mill is open on Tuesdays and Thursdays of each week.

A pack of sheep dogs played havoc with the flocks of Mr. Neighart and A. S. Walker on Sunday night, killing a number and wounding others.

All Spruce Creek Valley was shocked last Thursday morning when the word was received over the wire that Samuel Frank had committed suicide by shooting himself at the watering place, at 5 o'clock in the morning, when but few persons were about. The bullet penetrated his head at the lower part of the right ear and lodged above the left eye, in the temple, but did not cut through the skin. He was cold in death when found. It was with some difficulty that the weapon was found in the bottom of the stream, where he usually watered his horses. Of late he had been somewhat despondent. His friends thought that on account of a short corn crop and other losses, his farming was not just what he had hoped for, as he had followed lumbering until last year, when he engaged in farming on the James Oliver farm, near Graysville. He was a stanch Democrat and although he lived in a strong Republican district he was frequently elected to offices of trust. He was filling the office of school director and road supervisor at the time of his death. He was a member of the Presbyterian church and of the Stormstown Lodge of Odd Fellows. A large number of friends turned out for his funeral. He is survived by a widow, one son, Lloyd, at home; one sister, Christie, of Altoona, and one brother, Thomas A., of Baileyville. He was the youngest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Frank and was born in Ferguson township 50 years ago. Burial was made in the Graysville cemetery on Saturday, at 10 o'clock, Rev. R. M. Campbell officiating.

Lock Haven Hospital Fair.

Arrangements are under way by which it is hoped to run excursions to Lock Haven for the big hospital Fair October 5—15.

The armory of Company H. will be re-decorated on the interior for the Fair with a fountain, electrical effects and the general setting of an Italian garden, having two stately Pergolas, where the articles of the fair will be offered for sale. About 200 women have been sewing for months, making fancy work, aprons, lingerie underwear and waists, lamp shades, bags, cretonne boxes and dolls. The work is beautifully done by hand, of the latest design, best style and moderately priced. Just the opportunity for the early Christmas shopper.

In addition to fancy work, there will be a grocery, a smoking room, a dutch chocolate room, a quaint restaurant and various up-to-date attractions, including a good supper every night for 25cts. and a theatrical entertainment every night, also a girls minstrels, Kermiss dances, a vaudeville, and a light play.

The proceeds of the fair will be applied to liquidating the debt incurred in rebuilding the hospital destroyed by fire and a cordial invitation is extended to every one to enjoy a rare treat and contribute to a worthy cause by going to the fair Oct. 5—15.

"BACK TO THE FARM"

X.—The Farm as a Place to Grow Old.

By C. V. GREGORY.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

IT used to be the ambition of the farmer to make money enough so that he could afford to move to town and spend the rest of his days in comfort. Now it is the ambition of the city dweller to accumulate enough of this world's goods to enable him to purchase a little place in the country and grow old in the open air.

This change is typical of the change in sentiment that has taken place in regard to country life. This change in sentiment is due in a large measure to a change in country life itself.

At first country life was essentially the life of the pioneer. It was a life of hardships, and the reward was only a few of life's necessities. But these hardships developed a class of hardy, virile men who have conquered the American continent and brought it under man's control.

The days of pioneering on the farm are well nigh past. Now that the rough edges are worn off the true pleasure of life in the open is beginning to be appreciated. At first people crowded together in the cities for protection, later for convenience in transacting business. The city never was intended primarily as a place to live. In the early days the cities were deserted as soon as the danger which had forced the people together was over. They scattered out to their farms, where they could live in peace and plenty.

When the development of the city as a business center began no particular provision was made for the home life. People lived where they could, existing for their business rather than making their business exist for them. In all the years in which the cities of the United States have been developing the home life always has lagged behind. True, some of the men who were most successful in accumulating wealth built palatial homes. But there is no room in the city for many such homes. Rather must people live tiered one above another, layer upon layer. On all sides, above and below, the space in which they are free to move at will is marked by strictly defined limits. No wonder that in such circumstances man has longed for a fourth dimension in which he could expand.

People have endured these conditions because it paid them to do so. Business fed and clothed them, but business demanded that they be always close at hand. They knew that somewhere outside the web of paved streets lay an open country, but they knew of no way in which they could make a living there. The stories they heard from the country were stories of poorly paid toil, few pleasures and a premature old age. They preferred the discomforts to which they were accustomed.

The coming of electric transportation widened the horizon of the city. It made it possible for the best paid laborers to have houses of their own. It allowed the salaried man, who put in fewer hours, to live almost in the country. With a glimpse of suburban and country life and what it really meant to have plenty of room to breathe, the city dweller began to cherish an ambition. He began to long for an acre of his own, with a garden and a few berries and some chickens, where he could rest and grow old.

The advance in the price of food products made it not only possible, but comparatively easy, for the man who has given the best years of his life to the city to retire to the country. Perhaps I should not use the word retire. The swirling rush of twentieth century life has made the thought of retiring distasteful. The ambitious man lets go his work with reluctance. He would rather die in the harness than to rust away his remaining days in idleness. But there comes a time when the strongest man feels his grip weaken and his mind falter. The hard knocks of a strenuous life begin to make themselves felt. The long hours grow weary on his shoulders. Some men are situated so fortunately that they can let go by degrees, working as they feel like it and turning over to others the tasks of which they tire. Most men, however, must continue to meet the exacting demands of business to the farthest notch or drop out entirely. It is to them that the country makes its strongest appeal.

A house and an acre or more of land can be purchased or rented more cheaply than a house and lot in the city. The home can be supplied with all the conveniences that the family were used to in the city. The trolley and the telephone keep them in touch with their city friends. The city man who is past the days of the hard work demanded in a mercantile establishment or a factory can still make a fair living from the soil. The returns from an even acre or so of ground will go far toward paying the family's living expenses.

The pleasure of life in the open, where the air is pure and there is time to dream and room to be happy, will add years to the lives of the new made farmer and his wife. The freedom from responsibility calls back the light heartedness of youth. The tyranny of office hours is done away with. The luxury of independence is attained.

No sign of the return to the country is more encouraging than the tendency of the old farmers and their wives to spend the remainder of their days in the country. Some of the old farmers who move to town to end their days are satisfied perhaps, but most of them are not. The enforced idleness galls them. The narrow boundaries of a city lot stifle them. They miss their old friends and associates.

The home farm is a much better place than the city for the farmer to spend his declining years for many reasons. It is home to him, and a thousand pleasant memories cling around every knoll and tree. He can turn over to one of the boys the active work of managing the farm and still have most of the pleasure of farming without the responsibility. It may mean the construction of another house perhaps, but the expense will be less than the cost of a house in the city. There are always little tasks to be done when he feels like work, yet he can quit when he feels like quitting. When he is not in a mood to work there are always neighbors to visit. With his automobile or his horse and buggy he and his wife can go where and when they please. Thus the days pass pleasantly and smoothly, without a ripple of discontent or the strain of getting used to a new environment. The passing years leave few marks on either the farmer or his wife, for this sort of life is not calculated to encourage the advance of old age.

From the standpoint of the community the retired farmers are a valuable asset. A number of such families in the community give permanency to its social life. With little else to do and plenty of time to do it in the farmer and his wife can go ahead with the management of the club or grange. They can devise picnics and suppers and go ahead with lecture courses and celebrations.

These things are of incalculable benefit to any community, and yet too often the young farmers are too busy to look after all the details connected with them.

In looking after the business affairs of the township and county and state the farmer who is out of active business finds an outlet for his surplus energies. Township offices are by no means lucrative. Yet it is essential for the good of the community that they be filled by men who will take time to see that the township affairs are properly conducted. A farmer who no longer has a business of his own to demand his best attention is just the man for such a place.

The county supervisors have charge of a great amount of business. Upon the efficiency of their work depends the condition of the roads and bridges. The management of a county is no small job, yet it is too often intrusted to some office seeking politician because there is no one else who has time for the place. Here is another opportunity for the retired farmer.

ONE OF A RETIRED FARMER'S SIDE LINES.

He has plenty of time to do the work properly and to investigate any matters that come up. He is a substantial property holder, and his acts are in the line of conservative progress and in the main always right. He takes a more impartial view of things than if he were in active business for himself. The experience of years helps him to govern justly.

For the farmer with more ability and larger ambitions positions in the state legislature are open. Our legislatures are especially in need of more intelligent farmers in the lawmakers' seats. These men are unimpeachably honest, and they know how to strike an average between a do nothing policy and one of reckless extravagance.

The country needs men who have lived long enough to gain wisdom and experience. These men need the country. For the best good of themselves and for the best good of the nation they should grow old in the country.

BELLEFONTE LOSES NEXT CONVENTION BY 6 VOTES

County Commissioners Association Selects Indiana.

DUNLAP IS TREASURER

Centre Countian Again Chosen to Responsible Position—Former Auditor General Young Talks on Personal Property Tax.

That a billion dollars in personal property is escaping taxation in Pennsylvania every year was the assertion of former Auditor General Robert K. Young in an address last week to the State Association of County Commissioners, held at Wellsboro, Tioga County. The convention was attended by Commissioners H. E. Zimmerman and John L. Dunlap, Commissioners Clerk E. J. Williams and Solicitor Clement Dale, of Centre County. Mr. Dunlap was re-elected treasurer of the sssociation. J. M. Marshall, of Indiana, was chosen president; W. Q. Grabe, of Butler, vice president, and E. V. Philips, secretary.

A strenuous effort was made to have Centre County selected as the place for the next convention, but on a showdown, Indiana won out by a margin of 6 votes. The vote stood: Indiana, 54; Bellefonte, 48; West Chester, 22. Bellefonte was regarded as certain to win until in the eleventh hour West Chester was entered for the honor and this resulted in a hopeless division of the vote in the eastern county delegations.

E. E. Jones, of Susquehanna County, popularly dubbed "Good Roads Jones", was delegated to represent the association in watching road legislation at Harrisburg at the next session.

Mr. Young's address on the subject of taxation attracted considerable attention. Mr. Young said:

"With the development of those great public policies the state has inaugurated in the last few years, and to which the state government, and I believe, the people, are fully committed, policies like the conservation of public health, the establishment of the forest reservation, the policing of the public streams, the propagation of fish and game, and last but not least the improvements of highways—if these are to be promoted the state will be kept busy in finding ways and means with which to promote them.

"It is a laudable ambition for every board of county commissioners to desire to see the county's debt reduced without increasing the millage rate or levy, or if you are fortunate enough to be out of debt, it is a still pleasanter thing for a board of county commissioners to be able to reduce the millage.

"I think that the most fruitful field of endeavor to bring about desired results is a vigorous campaign to reach all personal property subject to taxation for state purposes. Taken as a whole, by and large, I regard the system of taxation in Pennsylvania as being in its broader aspects a good one, but I do not wish to be understood as saying that it is by any means perfect. I believe it to be better than that of which I have any knowledge, and much superior in my judgment to themuch discussed and much-lauded system of New York.

"It has often seemed to me probable that local assessors cannot fully realize the fact that of every dollar collected from personal property that reaches the state treasury 75 cents ultimately reaches the county treasury. It seems to me of primary importance to every man who thinks that real estate bears more than its just share of taxes that the laws relating to taxation of personal property should be enforced as efficiently as possible. This is the real solution of the problem of how to lighten taxes on real estate system.

"In order to fix your attention by some startling figures permit me to indulge in a personal statement to the effect that during the three years of my term as auditor general the amount of personal property returned by local assessors throughout the state to the board of revenue commissioners as subject to taxation for state purposes was increased $209,056,376.12. Upon this sum additional taxes were imposed amounting to $836,227.30.

"At the end of the fiscal year, November 30, 1909, the total amount of personal property returned from the sixty-seven counties of the state subject to taxation for state purposes reached the enormous sum of $141,799,627.02 and yielded a tax of $4,567,398.52, of which sum the various counties were entitled and received $3,391,441,98 or 75 per cent. Tioga's share of this sum based upon her returns amounted to $9,845.49, on 10½ per cent of the entire sum required to conduct the affairs of Tioga county. This is a very large proportion, and the taxes received from personal property is thus seen to be a considerable proportion of the whole money required for the county's uses. My belief is that this sum might be very greatly increased and perhaps doubled if all money subject to taxation for state purposes were honestly returned; or if the vigilance of the local assessor was great enough to enable him to report all that was subject to taxation that had not been returned by the owner.

"I am of opinion, and in this I merely concur with those of even greater experience, that although there is upward of a billion dollars returned now annually in personal property, subject to taxation for state purposes, there is fully another billion dollars that is not returned and is escaping taxation of the same character as that now returned and taxed; and that there is fully another billion of dollars in the form of school bonds that is escaping taxation altogether.

"Display of patriotism is not confined to times of war. Many more opportunities present themselves for an exercise of true patriotism in time of peace than in time of war; and even a higher quality of moral courage is required in times of peace because of the absence of the plaudits and approval of the multitude. It requires true moral courage to discharge the duties of any public office with absolute singleness of purposes and with a view only to the welfare of the public at large.

"I know of no office in our system of government requiring a higher order of integrity and general intelligence than the office of county commissioner in Pennsylvania. And I know of no office requiring the same degree of efficiency and ability so poorly compensated. It is of far more importance to the people of any county in the state how the business of the county commissioner's office is conducted than how the business of the governor's office is conducted. And during the round year I know of no assembly in the state whose meetings are fraught with more importance to the general welfare than the meetings of this association.

For Deaf Children.

In only three of the many schools for the deaf in this country is it the practice to accept a child before it is of the average public school age, and is it any wonder that so many children who enter State schools for the deaf at the age of 6 fail to make encouraging progress in acquiring speech, and are obliged finally to resort to the manual alphabet and the language of signs? The good done by the mental gymnastics is alone a "cash value" that justifies infant schools, says Robert A. Sanborn in The Delineator. After at least six years of this work the child, who has entered at the age of 2 or 3, is intended to be ready to go out among hearing children in the common schools. There the practical value of the training is put to the first severe test.

On this point I have solicited the testimony of two public-school teachers, the two who have in their respective classes a boy James, and a girl Rebecca. Both of these children learned speech in the Home for Training in Speech of Deaf Children (before they are of school age), a State institution located near Philadelphia.

Rebecca would be recognized at first sight as a girl of quick intelligence. She has a very slight amount of hearing, but not enough to enable her to acquire speech from ordinary speaking voice, even when raised. Her instruction in speech did not begin until she was 6 years old, when she had no speech whatever. According to her teacher, her advent into the public-school class was dreaded, but all uncertainty as to her fitness as a pupil was dispelled before the dismissal bell had rung upon her first morning. Contrary to her being, as was feared, a stumbling block that would retard the progess of the others, she has made herself an inspiration, not only to her schoolmates but also to her teacher, who is now as reluctant to give up the child as she once was to receive her.

The testimony of James' teacher agrees with that of her associate. James was taken into the Home School at the age of 3. His deafness is total, and compared with Rebecca's, his speech is not always so easily understood. His lip-reading, however, is quite as certain. His teacher had, like the other, known the dread to accept so untried a possibility, and likewise experienced the change from dread to gratitude and affection. "I have no trouble with James. He and I understand one another perfectly," she said.

Danderine

GROWS HAIR and we can

PROVE IT!

A lady from Minnesota writes: "As a result of using Danderine, my hair is close to five feet in length."

Beautiful Hair At Small Cost

HAIR troubles, like many other diseases, have been wrongly diagnosed and altogether misunderstood. The hair itself is not the thing to be treated, for the reason that it is simply a product of the scalp and wholly dependent upon its action. The scalp is the very soil in which the hair is produced, nurtured and grown, and it alone should receive the attention if results are to be expected. It would do no earthly good to treat the stem of a plant with a view of making it grow and become more beautiful—the soil in which the plant grows must be attended to. Therefore, the scalp in which the hair grows must receive the attention if you are to expect it to grow and become more beautiful.

Loss of hair is caused by the scalp drying up, or losing its supply of moisture or nutriment; when baldness occurs the scalp has simply lost all its nourishment, leaving nothing for the hair to feed upon (a plant or even a tree would die under similar conditions.)

The natural thing to do in either case, is to feed and replenish the soil or scalp as the case may be, and your crop will grow and multiply as nature intended it should.

Knowlton's Danderine has a most wonderful effect upon the hair glands and tissues of the scalp. It is the only remedy for the hair ever discovered that is similar to the natural hair foods or liquids of the scalp.

It penetrates the pores quickly and the hair soon shows the effects of its wonderfully exhilarating and life-producing qualities.

One 25-cent bottle is enough to convince you of its great worth as a hair growing and hair beautifying remedy—try it and see for yourself.

NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

NEW MUSICAL INSTRUMENT

Harp With Eighty-Six Strings Produces Tones of Full Orchestra.

The manufacture of a new musical instrument, to be known as the Albertstylo, and which produces the tones of a full orchestra when tuned to the proper pitch, is the task recently accomplished by Albert Schuck says the Indianapolis Star.

Mr. Schuck is of German birth and parentage, but from his boyhood has lived in this country. Early in his school life he showed a perference for art and music, and made a special study of these subjects. Also he studied mechanical drawing, and was for a time connected with a firm engaged in the manufacture of novelty musical instruments. In 1905 he played a light comedy musical act in a Western and Southern California vaudeville circuit.

Last September he conceived the idea of building a novelty harp, and in carrying out his plans he encountered many difficulties. When he went to the machine shops he found the machinists too busy to listen to him, so he had to depend upon his own resources, and without lathe or drill press he drilled by hand fifty-seven holes through a solid steel plate.

The insrument is supplied with a double sounding board, which is made of the same kind of wood used in the manufacture of the finest violin. This sounding board is very frail, being but little stronger than a violin, made so to produce a good vibrating quality. Over the upper sounding board are suspended eighty-six full size strings of steel music wire imported from Reslau, Bavaria. The strings are fastened at both ends to the iron plate, and vibrate only from under the name plate. This is where the bearing of the strings comes in contract with the sonnding board.

Now, in its completion, his harp is not only unique in mechanism, but also it is handsome, in appearance. Some of the best music critics of Indianapolis have examined it and have praised the brilliancy and sweetness of its tones.

Mr. Schuck has plans for another novelty instrument which he expects to build.

FOLEY'S ORINO LAXATIVE
FOR STOMACH TROUBLE and CONSTIPATION

TESTED AND PROVEN

There is a Heap of Solace in Being Able to Depend Upon a Well Earned Reputation.

For months Bellefonte readers have seen the constant expression of praise for Doan's Kidney Pills, and read about the good work they have done in this locality. Not another remedy ever produced such convincing proof of merit.

Mrs. John Eckel, 118 W. Lamb St., Bellefonte, Pa., says: "I used two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Green's Pharmacy Co. and say that they have been of greater benefit to me than all the other kidney medicines I have ever taken. I suffered from dull, nagging backaches and I always felt tired and languid. Dizzy spells and headaches also annoyed me and stooping or lifting caused sharp, twinges throughout my body. I was restless at night and had no strength or energy to attend to my housework. Soon after I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Green's Pharmacy Co., I improved and it was not long before I was in good health. I cheerfully recommend Doan's Kidney Pills in return for the benefit they brought me." (Statement given Oct. 21, 1907.)

Permanent Relief. On Nov. 23, 1909 when Mrs. Eckel was interviewed she said: "I willingly confirm endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. Since using them I have had no return of kidney complaint."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Prof. Jackson Speaks.

Professor J. Price Jackson, of State College, was one of the principal speakers last week at the thirty-third annual convention of the State Millers Association, held at Atlantic City. Scientific farming and propitious weather conditions were assigned as the reasons why the crops will surpass the best mark set in years. Cheers greeted the predictions of speakers conversant with the market, that Pennsylvania wheat will bring from 95 cents to a dollar a bushel and that the Keystone State farmers reap huge profits as a result.

Itching, bleeding, protruding or blind pies yield to Doan's Ointment, Chronic cases soon relieved, finally cured. Druggists all sell it.

CHAPTER XI.

THE WRONG MAN.

HERBECK dropped his quill, and there was a dream in his eyes. He sat there motionless, rapt. And thus the duke found him. He held a letter in his hand and tossed it to Herbeck.

"I shall throw 10,000 men across the frontier tonight."

"War again?"

"Read that. It is the second anonymous communication I have received within a week. As the first was truthful, there is no reason to believe this one to be false."

Herbeck was genuinely startled.

"What do you say to that?" triumphantly.

"This—let them go quietly back to Jugendheit."

"No!" blazed the duke.

"Are we rich enough for war?"

"What the devil is my army for if not to uphold my dignity, Herbeck?"

"Rather let me reason. This is some prank. They would never dare enter Dreiberg for aught else."

"I have seen this writing before," said Herbeck.

The duke struck the bell violently.

"Summon the chief of police," he said to the secretary.

"Will your highness leave the matter in my hands?" asked the chancellor.

"Herbeck, in some things you are weak."

"And in others I am strong," smiled the chancellor. "I am weak when there is talk of war; I am strong when peace is in the balance."

"YOU HAVE NEATLY ARRANGED A FINE COMEDY."

"Is it possible, Herbeck, that you do not appreciate the magnitude of the situation?"

"It is precisely because I do that I wish to move slowly. Wait. Let the police find out why they are here. There will be time enough then to declare war. They have never seen her highness. Who knows?"

"Ah! But they have violated the treaty."

"That depends upon whether their presence here is or is not a menace to the state. If they are here on private concerns which in nowise touch Ehrenstein it would be foolhardy to declare war."

"What do you advise?" wearily.

"Wait. In a day or so arrest them under the pretext that you believe them to be spies. If this invasion is harmless and they declare themselves the matter can be adjusted in this wise: Ignore their declaration and confine them a day or two in the city prison, then publish the news broadcast. Having themselves broken the letter if not the spirit of the treaty, they will not dare declare war. Every court in Europe will laugh."

The duke laughed. "You are right, Herbeck. Ah, here is the chief."

Herbeck read the letter in part to the chief, who jotted down the words, repeating aloud in a kind of mutter: "A mountaineer, a vintner, a carter, a butcher and a baker. You will give me their descriptions, your excellency?"

Herbeck read the postscript.

"But you didn't tell him who"—

"Why should he know?" said Herbeck, glancing shrewdly at the duke. "His ignorance will be all the better for the plot."

"One is as big and powerful as a Carpathian bear. Look out," warned Herbeck.

"And he is?"

"The mountaineer."

"And the vintner?"

"Oh, he is a little fellow and hasn't grown his bite yet," said Herbeck dryly.

The duke laughed again.

"I thank you, Herbeck. You have neatly arranged a fine comedy. When the arrest is made, give it as much publicity as possible. Take a squad of soldiers. It will give it a military look."

"No, your highness," touching the papers which strewed his desk. "This will keep me busy well into the evening."

Herbeck instructed the chief.

"Begin with the mountaineer and the vintner; the others do not matter so much." Then Herbeck laughed. The chief raised his head. He had not heard his excellency laugh like that in many moons. "Report to me your progress. Good luck to you!" said Herbeck with a gesture of dismissal.

Her highness found the duke waiting in her apartments.

"Why, father," kissing him, "what brings you here?"

"A little idea I have in mind." He drew her down to the arm of the chair. "We all have our little day dreams."

"Who does not, father?" She slid her arm round his neck.

"Herr Carmichael is a fine fellow, brave, witty, shrewd. If all Americans are like him America will soon become a force in the world. I have taken a fancy to him, and you know what they say of your father—no formality with those whom he likes. Humanly I am right, but in the virtue of everyday events in court life I am wrong. Herbeck has spoken of it, the older women speak of it, and they all say"—

"What do I care what they say?" hotly. "Are you not the grand duke, and am I not your daughter?"

"You must ride no more with Herr Carmichael. It is neither wise nor safe."

"Father!"

He was up with his arms folding around her. "Child, it is only for your sake. Listen to me.

"You must be a princess. You must steel your heart against the invasion of love unless it comes from a state equal or superior to your own."

"Yes, father. I shall not ride with him any more."

"Be a brave heart, and I shall engage to find a king for you."

"I don't want any playthings, father," with the old light touch, and then she looked him full in the eyes. "I promise to do nothing more to create comment if, on the other hand, you will promise to give me two years more of freedom."

The duke readily assented and shortly returned to his suit rather pleased that there had been no scene—not that he had expected any.

Considerable activity was manifest in the police bureau the rest of that day.

To return to Carmichael, he had never before concerned himself with resignations. Up to this hour he had never resigned anything he had set his heart upon. So it was not an easy matter for him to compose a letter to the secretary of state resigning the post at Dreiberg. True, he added that he desired to be transferred to a seaport town, France or Italy preferred. The high altitude in Dreiberg had affected his heart. However, in case there was no other available post they would kindly appoint his successor at once. It took courage indeed to face the matter squarely and resolutely. That she was not going to marry the king of Jugendheit did not alter his affairs in the least. It was all hopeless. He must go.

Some one was knocking on the door.

"A letter for your excellency," said the concierge.

"If Herr Carmichael would learn the secret of No. 40 Krumerweg let him attire himself as a vintner and be in the Krumerweg at 8 o'clock tonight."

This note was as welcome to the recipient as the flowers in the spring. An adventure? He was ready, now and always.

"I shall need the costume of a vintner this evening," he said.

"Oh, that will be easy," affirmed the concierge.

So it came about that Carmichael, dressed as a vintner, his hat over his eyes, stole into the misty night and took the way to the Krumerweg. He knew exactly where he wished to go—No. 40. After all, who was the lady in black, and why should he bother himself about her? She probably came from the back stairs of the palace. And yet the chancellor himself had been in this place.

A step? He trained his ear. But even as he did so his arms were grasped firmly and twisted behind his back, and at the same time a cloth was wrapped round the lower part of his face, leaving only his eyes and nose visible. He was helpless. He was fighting against three.

Then one of the three whistled. A minute or two after a closed carriage came into the Krumerweg, and Carmichael was literally bundled inside. His feet and hands were bound.

The carriage began to move slowly. One turn after another he counted, fixing as well as he could the topography of the town through which they were passing. Once the road outside of Dreiberg was reached a fast pace was set. At the Jugendheit barrier the carriage stopped. Presently there appeared at the door an old man dressed as a mountaineer. In his hand was a lantern.

"Pardon me, dear nephew— Fools!" he broke off, swinging round. "He has tricked you all. This is not he!"

Three astonished faces peered over the old man's shoulder. One was a carter, another a butcher and the third a baker.

Carmichael, now freed, stretched himself.

"Well?" he said, with a dangerous quiet.

"Herr Carmichael, the American consul!" The old man nearly dropped the lantern. "Oh, you infernal blockheads!"

Carmichael's anger dissolved, and he laughed. All the mystery was gone. He saw how neatly he had been duped. He still carried the note. This he gave to the leader of this midnight expedition.

"Humph!" said the old man in a growl. "I thought as much." He whispered to his companions. "Herr Carmichael, I shall have the honor of escorting you back to Dreiberg."

VINTNER? NOT MUCH!

On the way it all came back to Carmichael with the vividness of a forgotten photograph come upon suddenly — Bonn, the Rhine, swift and turbulent, a towheaded young fellow who could not swim well, his own plunge, his fingers in the flaxen hair and the hard fight to the landing. All this was a tale twice told.

Vintner? Not much!

CHAPTER XII.

HER FAN.

IT was dawn when they began to pull up the road to Dreiberg in a carriage. The mountaineer had been riding with the driver. The carriage stopped.

"I shall not intrude, I trust?" said the old man, opening the door and getting in.

"Not now," replied Carmichael. "What is all this about?"

"A trifle." The old man thought for awhile. "Suppose you had a nephew who was making a fool of himself over a woman."

"Nothing unusual in that."

"Suppose, though of good character, she was vastly his inferior in station; that marriage to him was merely a political contract. What would you do?"

"I believe I begin to understand."

"I am grateful for that."

"Your nephew is an ungrateful wretch. He knew all along who I was," went on the American. "I dragged him out of the Rhine upon a certain day, and he plays this trick!"

"You? Carmichael, Carmichael, of course; I should have remembered the name as he wrote me at the time. Thank you! And you knew him all the while?"

"No. I recalled his face, but the time and place were in the dark till this early morning. Here we are at the gates. What's this? Guards? I never saw them at these gates before."

After some trouble they passed the guards.

The mountaineer got out quickly, closed the door, spoke a word to the driver and slipped into an alleyway.

Carmichael arrived at the Grand hotel in time to see her serene highness, accompanied by two of her ladies and an escort of four soldiers, start out for her morning ride. He waited till they had passed, then slunk into the hotel. The concierge gazed at him in amazement. Carmichael winked. The concierge smiled. He understood. Americaner or Ehrensteiner, the young fellows were all the same.

"Guards at the gates," mused Carmichael as he soaked his head and face in cold water. "By George, it looks as if my friend the vintner was in for some excitement!"

Gretchen! Carmichael stopped, his collar but halfway around his throat. Now, by the Lord, that should not be! He would wring the vintner's neck. He was not in an amiable mood. Some one hammered on the door.

Grumbach entered.

"You are angry about something," he said.

"So I am. But you are always welcome."

"You have overslept?"

"No; on the contrary."

"You are disturbed. I'd like to know what's going on in that bullet head of yours."

"I have resigned the consulship."

"And for what reason?"

Carmichael silently drew on his coat.

"Ach! So you have one too?"

"One what?"

"One secret."

"Yes. But it's the kind we can't talk about."

"I understand. Have you had breakfast?"

"No."

"Neither have I. Let us go together."

There was a large crowd outside the palace that night, which was clear and starry, because of a great ball. A troop of cavalry patrolled the fence. Carriage after carriage rolled in through the gates, coming directly from the opera.

And close by the sentry box Carmichael saw Gretchen and her vintner. Carmichael could not resist stopping a moment. He raised his hat to Gretchen to the wonder of those nearest.

"Do you know where the American consulate is?" he asked low, so that none but Gretchen and the vintner heard.

"Yes," said the vintner, blushing with shame. "I live above the agency."

"Good! I shall expect to see you in the morning."

But the vintner was determined that he shouldn't. He would be at work in the royal vineyards on the morrow.

"Tomorrow?" repeated Gretchen, to whom this byplay was a blank. "Why should he wish to see you?"

"Who knows? Let us be going. It is half after 10," he added, as if to put forward some logical excuse for leaving at this moment.

A man followed them all the way to the Krumerweg.

Carmichael threw himself eagerly into the gayety of the dance. He was an accomplished waltzer, after the manner of that day, when one went round and round like some mechanical toy wound up. This would be the last affair of the kind for him, and he wanted a full memory of it. Between times he exchanged a jest or two with the chancellor or talked battles with old Ducwitz. Thrice while on the floor her highness passed him. But there was never a smile, never a glance. He became careless and reckless. He would seek her and talk to her and smile at her even if the duke threw a regiment in between. He saw Grumbach in the gallery.

"Now, what the devil is the Dutchman doing with a pair of opera glasses?"

Later her highness stood before one of the long windows in the conservatory listlessly watching the people in the square. Was that some one coming for her? She turned.

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION SUBMITTED TO THE CITIZENS OF THIS COMMONWEALTH FOR THEIR APPROVAL OR REJECTION, BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA, AND PUBLISHED BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF THE COMMONWEALTH, IN PURSUANCE OF ARTICLE XVIII OF THE CONSTITUTION.

Number One.

A CONCURRENT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to section twenty-six of article five of the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Resolved (if the Senate concur), That the following amendment to section twenty-six of article five of the Constitution of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:—

That section 26 of Article V., which reads as follows: "Section 26. All laws relating to courts shall be general and of uniform operation, and the organization, jurisdiction, and powers of all courts of the same class or grade, so far as regulated by law, and the force and effect of the process and judgments of such courts, shall be uniform; and the General Assembly is hereby prohibited from creating other courts to exercise the powers vested by this Constitution in the judges of the Courts of Common Pleas and Orphans' Courts," be amended so that the same shall read as follows:—

Section 26. All laws relating to courts shall be general and of uniform operation, and the organization, jurisdiction, and powers of all courts of the same class or grade, so far as regulated by law, and the force and effect of the process and judgments of such courts, shall be uniform; but, notwithstanding any provisions of this Constitution, the General Assembly shall have full power to establish new courts, from time to time, as the same may be needed in any city or county, and to prescribe the powers and jurisdiction thereof, and to increase the number of judges in any courts now existing or hereafter created, or to reorganize the same, or to vest in other courts the jurisdiction theretofore exercised by courts not of record, and to abolish the same wherever it may be deemed necessary for the orderly and efficient administration of justice.

A true copy of Resolution No. 1.
ROBERT McAFEE,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Number Two.

RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, so as to eliminate the requirement of payment of taxes as a qualification of the right to vote.

Resolved (if the House of Representatives concur), That the following amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:

That section one of article eight be amended, by striking out the fourth numbered paragraph thereof, so that the said section shall read as follows:

Section 1. Every male citizen twenty-one years of age, possessing the following qualifications, shall be entitled to vote at all elections, subject however to such laws requiring and regulating the registration of electors as the General Assembly may enact.

First. He shall have been a citizen of the United States at least one month.

Second. He shall have resided in the State one year (or if, having previously been a qualified elector or native-born citizen of the State, he shall have removed therefrom and returned, then six months), immediately preceding the election.

Third. He shall have resided in the election district where he shall offer to vote at least two months immediately preceding the election.

A true copy of Resolution No. 2.
ROBERT McAFEE,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Number Three.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, so as to consolidate the courts of common pleas of Allegheny County.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following amendment to the Constitution of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:—

That section six of article five be amended, by striking out the said section, and inserting in place thereof the following:

Section 6. In the county of Philadelphia all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the district courts and courts of common pleas, subject to such changes as may be made by this Constitution or by law, shall be in Philadelphia vested in five distinct and separate courts of equal and co-ordinate jurisdiction, composed of three judges each. The said courts in Philadelphia shall be designated respectively as the court of common pleas number one, number two, number three, number four, and number five, but the number of said courts may be by law increased, from time to time, and shall be in like manner designated by successive numbers. The number of judges in any of said courts, or in any county where the establishment of an additional court may be authorized by law, may be increased, from time to time, and whenever such increase shall amount in the whole to three, such three judges shall compose a distinct and separate court as aforesaid, which shall be numbered as aforesaid. In Philadelphia all suits shall be instituted in the said courts of common pleas without designating the number of the said court, and the several courts shall distribute and apportion the business among them in such manner as shall be provided by rules of court, and each court, to which any suit shall be thus assigned, shall have exclusive jurisdiction thereof, subject to change of venue, as shall be provided by law.

In the county of Allegheny all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the several numbered courts of common pleas shall be vested in one court of common pleas, composed of all the judges in commission in said courts. Such jurisdiction and powers shall extend to all proceedings at law and in equity which shall have been instituted in the several numbered courts, and shall be subject to such changes as may be made by law, and subject to change of venue as provided by law. The president judge of said court shall be selected as provided by law. The number of judges in said court may be by law increased from time to time. This amendment shall take effect on the first day of January succeeding its adoption.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to section eight, article nine, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in accordance with the provisions of the eighteenth article thereof:—

Amendment to Article Nine, Section Eight.

Section 2. Amend section eight, article nine, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, which reads as follows:—

"Section 8. The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the assent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law; but any city the debt of which now exceeds seven per centum of such assessed valuation, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum, in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation," so as to read as follows:—

Section 8. The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the assent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law; but any city, the debt of which now exceeds seven per centum of such assessed valuation, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum, in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation, except that any debt or debts hereinafter incurred by the city and county of Philadelphia for the construction and development of subways for transit purposes, or for the construction of wharves and docks, or the reclamation of land to be used in the construction of a system of wharves and docks, as public improvements, owned or to be owned by said city and county of Philadelphia, and which shall yield to the city and county of Philadelphia current net revenue in excess of the interest on said debt or debts and of the annual installments necessary for the cancellation of said debt or debts, may be excluded in ascertaining the power of the city and county of Philadelphia to become otherwise indebted: Provided, That a sinking fund for their cancellation shall be established and maintained.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

Three Days Session to be Held at Altoona on October 12, 13 and 14.

When Robert Raikes started his first Sunday School in 1180 or thereabouts, his friends and neighbors laughed at him and dubbed him "Bobby Wild Goose," but his wild goose idea had so much good in it that it would not be downed by sneers and jeers, and today the Sunday School idea girdles the globe.

The modern Sunday School, with the Bible as its text-book, employs the time and talent of the best scholars of the land. Among its officers and teachers are found the first men and women in all walks of life, and as an institution, the Sunday School is recognized as one of the most potent factors in the making of strong manhood and beautiful womanhood.

Pennsylvania is the largest Sunday School territory in the world; over 11,000 schools are located in the State, with a membership of 1,841,855. Like all progressive agencies, these schools are federated in a State wide movement under the name of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association, with auxiliary Associations in every one of the sixty-seven Counties. The organization seeks to bring improvement in methods and equipment to the smallest school held in the country school house, as well as the largest city school on the Avenue.

Representatives of these schools assemble annually in State Convention for the purpose of outlining its yearly policy. The next Convention will be the Forty-Sixth Annual and is announced to meet in Altoona, Pa., October 12, 13 and 14. This annual gathering is the largest assembly of religious workers held within the State.

Here and There.

Court convenes on Monday, next. The schedule of cases covers two weeks.

W. H. Grove, of Spring Mills, was a business visitor to Tyrone, on Friday, last.

John Philip Sousa and his famous band gave a concert at Lock Haven, on Friday night, last.

The plant of the Renovo Fire Brick and Clay Works, at Renovo, will be sold at Sheriff's sale, on Saturday, October 15.

Residents of Huntingdon are no little excited these days over the possibility that an air ship factory may be built at that place.

Harry Beach, who pitched for the Clearfield team in the Mountain League, has signed with the Harrisburg Tri-State baseball club for next season.

Thomas Barnes, of Barnesboro, who has been in ill health for some time past, was last Thursday removed to Philadelphia in a private car.

Football at Hughes Field, at 2:30 o'clock, on Saturday, between old and new players at the Academy. Good game. Admission 15 cents.

Postmaster John Gowland, of Philipsburg has purchased from the Philipsburg Coal & Land Company a lot on Spruce Street, adjoining his property, in that town.

J. M. Bunnell, of Johnstown, Pa., will exhibit at the Bellefonte Fair high grade pianos and autotones. Any one desiring a bargain in a first-class piano, don't fail to visit the booth.

Dr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Hayes are preparing to go to Atlanitc City during the next week or ten days. They have about decided to purchase a cottage at the seashore.

After a most delightful visit of three weeks with friends at Bellefonte, Lemont and State College, Mrs. Margaret Holt and daughter, Rachael, last week returned to their home, at Philipsburg.

The ad of Mallory, the photographer, on another page of "The Republican," will give you something to think about and will help you reach a decision if you want something especially fine in his line.

Mrs. W. H. Boon and three children, Robert, Ruth and Jennie, departed last week for their home, at Lambert, Mississippi, after a visit of three months with Mrs. Boon's mother, Mrs. Washington Irvin.

David Atherton, A. W. Marks and Heber Wolf, representing Philipsburg's borough Council, last week visited Pittsburg to witness a demonstration of a new magnetic arc light. The new lighting system may be installed in Philipsburg.

Deputy Sheriff James B. Strohm was last week removed from Plainfield, N. J., to his home, at Centre Hall. During the last few months his health has been greatly impaired, but now his many friends trust that he is on the road to a rapid recovery.

C. T. Fryberger, Frank Weber and G. F. Troutman, representing the Board of Education, of Philipsburg, and Professor B. I. Myers, superintendent of the Philipsburg public schools, came to Bellefonte on Friday, last, to attend the dedication of the new High School building.

George Simcox, accompanied by a friend, spent last week at Centre Hall, returning to his home in Sugar Valley on Saturday. Mr. Simcox is a splendid citizen and is popular with a large circle of friends. While at Centre Hall he greatly enjoyed himself, returning home feeling well satisfied with his trip.

Miss Sarah Mock, of Philipsburg, has gone to Ypsilanti, Mich., where she will be associated with her sister, Miss Edith, in the millinery business. Miss Edith Mock removed to Michigan several months ago and immediately met with so much success that she induced her sister to join her with a view to greatly enlarging their business.

Prof. J. Angel, the well known eyesight specialist, will be at the Brockerhoff House on Wednesday and Thursday, September 28 and 29, which will afford parents an exceptional opportunity to have their children's eyes examined and learn whether they are in need of glasses. Prof. Angel announces that he will make a special reduction of 25 percent. in his charges on this occasion, which will be interesting and helpful to his many patrons in Centre County.

Davy Chambers and Jim. and George Uzzle spent several hours Friday, last, hours in Bellefonte on making the run over from Clarence in the Chambers automobile. They were engaged in buying up mules and succeeded in finding five which they started toward Clarence on Sunday. Not having heard of anything unusal happening in that direction during the last few days, we assume that the mules arrived at Clarence without doing more than kicking up their heels in disgust over the "breakers" placed in the mountain road by supervisors who have a grudge against automobiles. We would suggest to Davy that some day he line up all five mules at each "breaker," with the French end of the animals toward the obstruction, and then command them to kick. If that won't help matters the only thing we can suggest is that supervisors be elected who are not cranks on the automobile question.

For a good smoke try Black & White at Greens.

Lucille, the 10-months old child of Mr. Mrs. William Houser died yesterday.

Miss Anna Woodcock on Tuesday gave a luncheon, at which covers were laid for sixteen.

Dr. Thomas C. VanTries this week transacted business in Tyrone, Altoona and Hollidaysburg.

Mrs. Patsy Stewart and daughter, Miss Margaret Stewart, departed today for a visit to Hagerstown Md.

County Superintendent of schools D. O. Etters was a genial visitor in town between trains on Tuesday.

Misses Ella Snyder, May Haupt, Emma Murry and Rose and Stella Palmer, of Tyrone, were Sunday visitors to State College.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Morris contemplate closing their home on East Linn Street for the winter and taking apartments at Bush House.

Hiram Fink and Miss Ada E. Poorman, both of Bald Eagle, were married at Tyrone, on August 27th, last. They will reside at Bald Eagle.

W. C. Snyder, superintendent of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, at Snow Shoe, transacted business and greeted friends in town on Tuesday.

Among our callers this week was A. W. Houser, of Pleasant Gap. He was attending to some business in town and found time to get around and greet old friends.

The annual meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the Young Men's Christian Association will be held at the Association Hall, on Monday evening, October 3, at half-past seven.

Mrs. Catharine Fiedler of Madisonburg, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Harrison Kline, of Bishop Street, this week. Mrs. Fiedler is 77 years of age but is more active than most persons of sixty years.

The six-months-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Livingston, of Sunbury, was brought to Bellefonte for burial on Tuesday. Mrs. Livingston will be recalled as formerly Miss Iva Rishel.

J. W. Weaver, an old soldier and former Centre countian, now residing at Olean, N. Y., visited friends and relatives here last week. Mr. Weaver was one of the charter members of Gregg Post, 95, G. A. R.

Former Senator Cyrus E. Woods, of Greensburg, general counsel for the Pittsburg Coal Company, spent Sunday at the old Woods homestead, at Boalsburg, later stopping over in Bellefonte for an hour or two to greet friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morris have rented the Harper property, on West Linn Street, and will take possession on October 1, next. Misses Louise and Jane Harper will move into apartments, probably with Mrs. Gephart, in the Hibler property, on Allegheny Street.

Misses Lucile and Kittie Hayes, of Union City, Pa., are pleasant guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. I. Willard. Mrs. Willard is an aunt of the Misses Hayes, the latter stopping over enroute to Baltimore, Md., where they will enter college and to which place they will go tomorrow.

It is with sincere regret that we note the serious illness of Miss Helen Rockey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Rockey, of Zion. Miss Rockey is a professional nurse and recently was in charge of a case in Philadelphia. She was ill when she returned to the home of her parents and later typhoid fever developed. Her condition during the last few days has been such as to occasion alarm. That she may recover and be restored to health is the hope of a host of admiring friends.

Andrew H. Knisely, a former Bellefonte boy who for some time was located at State College, has recently opened a restaurant at Tyrone. The "Herald", of that place, speaking of his opening day, had this to say: "A. H. Knisely's new cafe in the DeFerie block opened on Saturday afternoon very auspiciously. The patronage accorded Mr. Knisely was very encouraging as from two in the afternoon until eleven o'clock in the evening his place of business was crowded. By midnight he was sold entirely out and had to close the doors."

Postmastar Herman North of Bradford, was a Bellefonte visitor over Tuesday night, stopping in town for a little surprise visit with his sister, Mrs. F. W. Crider. When he arrived at the Crider home he was the one to be surprised, for he then learned that Mrs. Crider was away on an automobile trip to Philadelphia and Atlantic City. Mr. North was enroute to Richmond, Virginia, to attend the annual convention of postmasters of first class postoffices, which is being held at that place and at which he is one of the principal speakers.

Sheriff and Mrs. W. E. Hurley were last week summoned to Altoona on an especially sad mission. Two children of of Mrs. Hurley sister died from typhoid fever just a few hours apart. A daughter, Mrs. Effie Woods, was the first to die. When the heartbroken members of the family retutned from the cemetery it was to learn that Mrs. Woods' brother, Sheldon Daniels, had also passed away. Both had been extremely low for some time and while little hope had been entertained for their recovery, the two deaths, coming so closely together, filled the hearts of the bereaved family with sorrow.

Try "Rexall Cherry Bark" for that cough—You can get it at Greens.

Misses Jane Harper and Helen Ceader will resume their dancing class in the first week of October.

Mrs. Horace Musser returned home on Tuesday after a visit of one month with friends in St. Louis, Mo.

Rome Harper is a Bellefonte visitor this week. Edward Harper came up from Curtin to spend Sunday with his sisters, Misses Louise and Jane.

Mrs. Domer Smith, of Elizabeth, Illinois, last week attended the grangers picnic, at Centre Hall, returning home on Saturday. She formerly resided at Centre Hall.

A. C. Mingle and family, who had such a thrilling experience in an automobile accident near Philadelphia, will arrive home tonight. Word received from them is that they are all well and greatly enjoyed their trip. Strange, to say, their automobile was but slightly damaged.

A very genial visitor to Bellefonte on Saturday, last, was James C. Nolan, of Walker township, who found time to transact business and greet his numerous friends. Mr. Nolan is a stanch Republican, one of the type that stands loyally by the old party. He is chairman of his precinct and may always be depended upon to take off his coat for the ticket.

Next Sunday Rev. J. F. Hower, of the local United Evangelical Church, will preach and be the speaker for "Rally Day," at Lewistown. In his absence Rev. C. C. Shuey has kindly consented to fill the pulpit, in the morning at 10:30, and Rev. I. C. Shearer will preach in the evening, at 7.30. The public is cordially invited to these services.

One of the most interesting visitors to Bellefonte in many a day was Harry A. Tate, who twenty-four years ago lived here but who now resides at Roanoke, Virginia. With Mrs. Tate and three of their five children, Harry arrived in town on Saturday and after a most delightful little visit returned home yesterday, regretting that he was unable to remain longer in the good old town. Harry is general scale inspector for the Norfolk & Western Railroad Company and the fact that he has held down such a responsible position for a number of years bears testimony to the fact that the company knows when it has the right man in the right place.

Had Narrow Escape.

John Raymond, driver on Beezer's meat market delivery wagon, had a narrow escape from being killed by a Pennsylvania Railroad passenger train on Tuesday afternoon. The afternoon train for Tyrone was pulling into the Bellefonte station when Mr. Raymond attempted to drive across the tracks. He evidently misjudged the distance between him and the rapidly approaching train and was endeavoring to cross the tracks despite the warning cries of a score of persons standing nearby. Policeman Daley Justice, with considerable presence of mind, seized the horse's bridle and brought the animal to a sudden stop. The flagman on the approaching train sounded a warning and as quickly as possible brought the train to a stop with such force as to shake up the passengers. As it was, nobody was injured, although Mr. Raymond's escape was by such a narrow margin that the incident caused considerable excitement.

Hospital Notes.

Mrs. Mable Bathurst, of Curtin; admitted for treatment for typhoid fever.

Samuel Griffith, of Bellefonte; admitted with rheumatism.

Mrs. Margaret Harter, of Bellefonte; admitted for treatment.

Anna Miller, Pierce Fulton and Mrs. Ellen Gephart, all of Bellefonte; discharged as cured.

Miss Lois Calderwood, superintendent, away on vacation; visiting friends in Altoona and points west of that place.

Marriage Licenses.

Register Earle C. Tuten has issued the following marriage licenses in the last week:

David A. Nelson,	Philipsburg
E. Belle Thomas,	"
John I. Lucas,	Curtin
Viola D. Summers,	Wingate
Morton E. Bartley,	Bellefonte
Celeste C. Beck,	Spring Mills
George W. Rider,	Bellefonte

Osceola Man Takes Bride.

Taking his friends by surprise, William J. McFeeters, of Osceola, accompanied Miss Lou Rumberger, of Chester Hill, to Hollidaysburg, where they were married on Wednesday evening of last week. The groom is a splendid young man and is popular with a large circle of friends in Osceola: The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Rumberger, of Chester Hill.

"Fats" vs. "Leans."

Not quite satisfied with defeating the Bellefonte "Leans", 12-11, on Saturday, last, the Bellefonte "Fats" yesterday repeated the trick, this time the score being 16-8. Tomorrow the two teams will again clash at Hughes Field and the collision promises to be worth seeing.

Were Wedded Here.

E. Wilson Ammerman and Miss Barbara E. Hazzard, both of Nittany, were married at Bellefonte, on Wednesday, September 14. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Bingham.

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 24, 1910.

Hon. Sidney A. Foster, Secy.

Dear Sir:--Your favor in showing different options I may have on my policy, mature in December, is at hand.

The result is marvelous-it reads like a fairy tale-that I have only paid in $562.20. Have had insurance for twenty years and then get back $780.00 which is $270.80 more than I paid in.

Which option will I take? I rather expect I will "take the money." Money seems "so easy to take," and yet I am not entirely sure, for the options; as I read them over, seem like the acts in a three ring circus--each one better than the other --will advise you later. But say, Brother Foster, when you took that little policy from me twenty years ago, why didn't you make it "five or "ten", and why does a man think he confers a great favor when he takes an insurance policy? Money always goes--nearly all of it goes, and premium money while it goes too--comes back. How little of the other money that goes comes back.

I think a lot of your abllity and know you generally do what you start to do; that being so, why didn't you write me five or ten, twenty years ago? And then automobiles wouldn't be so hard to get

Tell agents for the Royal Union to cut out thousand dollar policies aud make them for five or ten. Its good advice.

Thank you for your courteous letter and your "options."

Very truly yours,

H. S. CHASE.
